11 Dodge Bullets, Flee Hijacked Plane

Colombian Liner, Weary Crew Back in Indies Isle

ORANJESTAD, Aruba (UPI) — A hijacked Colombian airliner and 38 hostages returned Thursday night to this Dutch Caribbean island for the third time in 24 hours, reportedly to collect a cash ransom, after circling overhead for more than an hour.

The four-engined turbo-prop Electra had left 5½ hours earlier after the sensational escape of 11 passengers who forced the rear door open and tumbled out of the plane amid a volley of shots as it started to taxi.

The plane's captain flew towards San Salvador at the demand of its two hijackers, but did not land and returned to Aruba.

A Colombian radio network that has remained tuned into the airline's radio frequency said the hijackers have given the company until 8 a.m. PDT today to pay a reduced ransom of $160,000. The hijackers originally demanded the release of 47 "political prisoners and a ransom of $200,000, which later was increased to $300,000.

Juvenal Mario Gaviria, an executive of the airline, has been standing by for several hours in Aruba with a $50,000 down payment toward the ransom, according to airport sources.

A total of 49 passengers and crew members had been held captive aboard the plane in Aruba for nearly 24 hours after the craft was hijacked over Colombia.

The hijackers refused to permit a new five-man crew to board the plane and insisted that the tired, original crew continue the flight.

The long-haired, masked hijackers, armed with pistols and submachineguns, demanded a cash ransom of $300,000 for release of the hostages and plane, a four-engine Electra belonging to the Colombian SAM airline. They said they would increase their demand by $50,000 for every hour they had to wait for their money.

Heat in the parked plane during the day was described as stifling and the hijackers allowed 38 passengers, most of them women and children, to debark. Airport officials connected a second air conditioning unit to the plane in an effort to bring down the heat.

"Everyone is tired and nervous, including the hijackers," one freed passenger said. "Everyone is calling for a doctor. The hijackers are letting the sick passengers leave."

The plane was hijacked in the air between Cali and Barranquilla Wednesday on a Colombian domestic flight and the pilot ordered to fly to Oranjestad to refuel.

There were 89 persons aboard at the time, including the two hijackers. Between 5 p.m. Wednesday and midday Thursday, however, the 38 passengers were permitted to leave the plane.

The hijackers originally demanded the release of 49 "political prisoners" in Colombia, as well as a cash ransom, but apparently withdrew the former demand when the Colombian government refused to negotiate.

At dawn Thursday the hijackers ordered the plane flown to Lima, Peru, but the aircraft had to turn back minutes later because of problems with the propeller lubrication system.

A Netherlands Antilles Airline (ALM) plane which took some of the released passengers to Medellin, Colombia, was due back later Thursday with propeller lubricant and a company mechanic to check the plane.

The pilot of the hijacked plane, Capt. Jorge Lucena, identified the hijackers as young men between 25 and 30. He said one held a gun to the back of his neck while the other held passengers at gunpoint. He said they claimed to have bombs in a suitcase.

The political affiliation, if any, of the hijackers was not immediately known. The prisoners whose release they demanded were mainly members of the Castroite Army of National Liberation, ELN.

Rotating Air Strikes Threatening Today

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada machinists across Canada have voted for strike action to back contract demands and are to hold a news conference here today to outline possible plans for, and timing of, rotating strikes against the airline.

Results announced Thursday by the 6,900-member International Association of Machinists, showed that 91 per cent of the ballots were for rejection of the company's latest contract offer and 87 per cent favored a strike.

The machinists may strike legally today.

(There are some 25 union members in the Victoria area but union spokesmen say no plans have been made for strike in this area at this time.)

The machinists, whose last contract expired March 25, are seeking a four-day work week and a wage increase of 15 per cent in a one-year contract.

Air Canada's last offer was for a raise of 12 per cent over 28 months.

Present rate for a two-year mechanic is $4.99 an hour and the top rate is $5.49 an hour.

A non-monetary issue in the dispute involves union complaints that some of its members were laid off last year during an air traffic controllers' strike.

Other contentious issues include the hiring of part-time employees by the company, classification by the company of 54 specific job positions with bilingual requirements and a company request to change work schedules where there is "requirement of service."

In Ottawa earlier Thursday, the federal labor department appointed Roy Gallagher of Winnipeg to mediate the dispute but a department official said later this does not interfere with the machinists' legal strike right.

Gallagher acted as a conciliator earlier in the dispute and his report was released to both parties May 22.

Former chairman of the Manitoba Minimum Wage Board, he is counsel for the Winnipeg Police Association and has been a mediator several times for the federal government in negotiations with railroads and grain handlers in Western Canada, Ottawa and Thunder Bay, Ont.

He is to commence mediation in Montreal today.

Haldeman 'No' Conflicts With Others

WASHINGTON (AP) — H. R. Haldeman said Thursday that "at no time, nor in any way," did he participate in covering up the Watergate affair while he was President Nixon's chief of staff.

Haldeman

His testimony conflicts with that of others who attended an important White House meeting last June 23, according to a senator and a congressman on separate investigating committee.

"I believe all of my actions were proper, in accord with the president's instructions and clearly in the national interest," Haldeman told reporters after testifying for three hours behind the closed doors of a Senate subcommittee.

But Senator John McClellan (Dem.-Ark.), chairman of a subcommittee looking into Central Intelligence Agency aspects of the Watergate scandal coverup, said there were serious conflicts between the testimony of White House aides and top officials of the CIA and FBI.

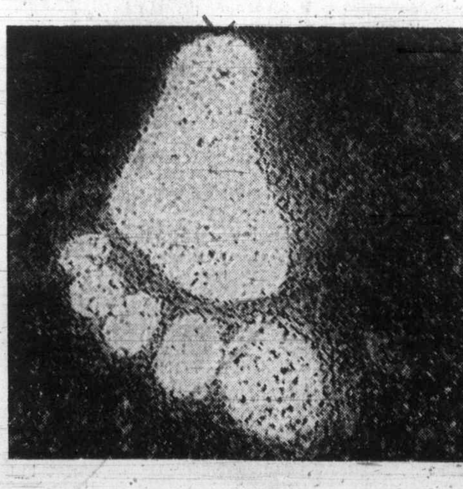
Spot To Watch

Motorists crossing Cascade Mountains on North Cascade Highway are greeted by several signs warning of "deer crossing," but on entire 75-mile highway there's only one spot where drivers are warned that a sasquatch may want to cross. Near sign is line of huge footprints indicating something may have crossed the road.



Surprising Upset

Protestant Chief Elected in Ireland

DUBLIN (AP) — Erskine Childers, 68, a London-born Protestant, upset all the odds Thursday to win election as the Irish republic's next president.

—AP

Childers succeeds the old revolutionary Eamon de Valera, 91, who dominated Irish politics for more than half a century.

In elections the same day for local councils in Northern Ireland, the official Unionist party, traditional representative of the Protestant majority, appeared to be reasserting its grip.

Early results, covering about half the 526 seats at stake, showed the Unionists with 108 seats won. Militant Protestant "loyalist" factions, opposed to British policy, had taken 39.

The voting was split along the troublesome sectarian divide between pro-British factions and Roman Catholics hoping to unite Northern Ireland with the republic.

In the most spectacular violence of voting day in Ulster, terrorists bombed two taverns in downtown Belfast Thursday night, then sprayed one of them with machine-gun fire.

Initial reports indicated one person was killed in each incident. Several persons were wounded.

The councils are local authorities concerned with planning, utilities and matters of health and education.

Voting in Ulster was considered as a dry run for provincial assembly elections scheduled for June 28.

Despite the violence surrounding the outlawed Irish Republican Army's campaign to break the link with Britain, the Ulster poll apparently topped 60 per cent, unusually high for municipal voting.

REYKJAVIK (UPI) — President Nixon lifted his glass of champagne in a toast Thursday night at a summit meeting dinner given by President Kristian Eldjarn of Iceland.

"I offer a toast this evening which has never been offered before because such a meeting as this never occurred before and may never occur again.

"A toast to the president of Ireland."

At CO's Home: Six 'Wonderful' Secret Weekends

LONDON (Reuter) — The mass circulation Daily Mirror quotes Princess Anne's fiance, Mark Phillips, today as saying the couple spent six secret weekends together at his commanding officer's home last Autumn.

In a report from Bergen, West Germany, where Lieut. Phillips' regiment is stationed, The Mirror says he told how love blossomed as he and the princess spent idyllic weekends together at the house near Catterick army camp in Yorkshire, northern England.

"Anne and I really got to know one another last autumn. For six weekends we stayed in my commanding officer's home — an ordinary army officer's house at Catterick," Phillips is quoted as saying.

"My regiment was stationed there and Anne came up on six consecutive Friday nights. She would leave early on Monday morning. During those weekends we hardly ever left the house and no one knew we were there.

"It was a wonderful time together that we will never forget."

'Shame' For Howard

OTTAWA (CP) — For the second time in as many days a motion — this time from a Liberal — to congratulate Princess Anne on her engagement was blocked by a scattering of "nays" in the House.

While it wasn't clear where the dissension was Wednesday, it was quite evident Thursday.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena), was greeted by cries of "shame" when he said the Commons had "more important things to do."

A telegram of congratulations was sent to the princess by Governor-General Roland Michener, and Prime Minister Trudeau had sent a letter of best wishes to Queen Elizabeth.

Canadians Stay in Laos

- Disputes block Viet peace team chiefs' meeting. Page 3

VIENTIANE (Reuter) — Canada will remain a member of the international control commission in Laos following Ottawa's decision to withdraw observers from Vietnam, Canadian chief delegate John Hammill said today.

Hammill had been asked to comment on his country's decision to pull out of the International Commission of Control and Supervision in Vietnam.

He said both the Vientiane government and the pro-communist Pathet Lao still needed the assistance of the Laos commission which was set up in 1962 and has Canada, Poland and India as its members.

"We have received no new instructions from Ottawa," Hammill added.

A ceasefire in Laos was signed Feb. 21 and the commission here is supposed to observe the truce and oversee prisoner releases. But like its equivalent in Vietnam, it is troubled with divergent views of its members and the Pathet Lao will not allow the commission to inspect areas held by the front.

gin in 1966 and thus scored a remarkable personal triumph in the Irish republic.

The turnout was also about 60 per cent of the two million electorate, which apparently contributed to Childers' success.

Childers was the candidate of Fianna Fail, successors of the men who fought against the treaty with Britain in the Irish civil war of 1922-23.

His father was a writer and English army officer who took up the cause of Irish independence, and was executed during the civil war.

The execution was carried out by the Irish Free State government, whose successors are the major part of the present coalition government.

The coalition, led by Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave, won the national elections only three months ago, and appeared confident of victory in the presidential race.

Both Childers and O'Higgins campaigned on platforms of change, promising to make the office more active while retaining its nonpartisan nature.

Childers talked of forming a brain trust to turn out new ideas and help Ireland overcome the worst effects of industrialization. O'Higgings promised to campaign abroad to promote Irish ideas and products. The presidential mansion, he declared, would become the focus of a lively social and cultural life.

The electorate seemed to ignore arguments of the politicians and voted strictly for personalities, preferring Childers to O'Higgins, a Catholic family man of impeccable political record.

Childers was 17 when his father was executed under a death warrant signed by O'Higgins's uncle.

Childers was taken to his father's cell on the execution eve. He was told that night to put aside all bitterness and never to speak of the civil war.

He kept that promise through 30 years in Irish politics, most of them as a government minister and for several years as deputy prime minister.

At Cambridge University, Childers studied medicine and engineering, but for most of his life has been a professional politician.

He has promised as president to seek reconciliation with the Protestant majority of Northern Ireland, which has resisted ending the partition of 50 years ago.

Haldeman in Conflict

Lucien Nedzi (Dem.—Mich.), chairman of the House intelligence subcommittee, said there were "considerable disparities" also in the sworn testimonies of former deputy CIA director Vernon Walters and former FBI director Patrick Gray.

"I believe it would be appropriate for the justice department to review this matter," Nedzi said after Gray appeared before his subcommittee for three hours. "We have two versions under oath that are not consistent."

Nedzi refused to give details on the differences, but indicated they involved the question of whether the White House tried to get the CIA to block part of the FBI's Watergate investigation.

Central to the issue is a meeting held in John Ehrlichman's White House office six days after the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic party headquarters in the Watergate office building.

Haldeman, Ehrlichman, CIA Director Richard Helms and Walters were at that meeting.

Walters testified before the senate armed services committee in mid-May that Haldeman told him to tell Gray that if the FBI pursued an investigation of funds in Mexico, connected with the Watergate case, the inquiry would compromise certain CIA activities and resources in Mexico.

Walters said he then passed the word to Gray, who in turn said the FBI postponed action until later, when it was learned there was no CIA involvement.

Ehrlichman and Haldeman gave a different version of the meeting to reporters after their separate McClellan subcommittee appearances Wednesday and Thursday.

Haldeman said:

"At the meeting, Gen. Walters was asked to meet with Director Gray of the FBI to insure that any unrelated covert operations of the CIA or any unrelated national security activities which had been previously undertaken, by some of the Watergate principals not be compromised in the process of the Watergate investigation and the attendant publicity and political furor.

"This was done with no intent or desire to impede or cover up any aspect of the Watergate investigation itself. Any other actions taken or suggestions made by others were without my knowledge and without the knowledge of the president."

Ehrlichman had told reporters:

"I was almost a visitor at that meeting. It was held in my office.

"Had Gen. Walters at the June, 1972 meeting said to Mr. Haldeman and me the things he apparently said later, I have no doubt he would have saved himself a trip to see Director Pat Gray. Had we been told flatly there was no 'Mexican connection' to the CIA at that time, that would have ended the matter as far as I was concerned."

McClellan said Haldeman was asked why Helms, the CIA director, was not asked about possible CIA involvement since he was at the meeting.

"I hardly think his answer to that was satisfactory," McClellan told reporters. "His explanation to that was somewhat vague." But he did not say what the answer was.

Haldeman read a short statement to reporters that began:

"I can categorically state . . . that at no time, nor in any way, did I suggest, direct or participate in any coverup of the Watergate investigation.

"With regard to the CIA . . . I confirmed to the committee today that I neither asked the CIA to participate in any Watergate coverup, nor did I ever suggest that the CIA take any responsibility for the Watergate break-in."

Haldeman said he had only a single contact with the CIA about Watergate and that was the June 23 meeting.

I WAS TEMPTED to start out with a play on Gabriel Heater's famous opening—there's good news this morning.

Actually, however, the pessimism in me acts as a shackle in a sort of, I'll-believe-it-when-I-see-it manner.

Having been almost maniacal in my pursuit of acupuncture recognition for the past couple of years, any news on the subject comes out good news and Tuesday night at the Empress my spirits were buoyed more than somewhat as Dr. Peter Banks, the president-elect of the Canadian Medical Association and the British Medical Association, related his first-hand observations of acupuncture healing in China.

AT THIS EARLY point in the narrative, I should throw in a dash of cold water. Banks admits he approached the acupuncture phenomenon with a fair amount of medical reserve. Today he still possesses some skepticism, but it was obvious listening to him, that what he observed has given him a great deal of hope and enthusiasm for this ancient Chinese method of pain relief.

"We have an open mind," he said, "We want to experiment."

Dr. Banks went on to explain the putting of such thought into the gear of practicality has already begun. He said he hopes to finalize, possibly sometime today, an exchange fellowship with China that would bring acupuncture experts to our country.

BANKS' PLAN would have these experts setting up no-cost therapy treatment centres at various universities. They would be patient clinics and while he didn't spell it out, the guess is the patients would go to these clinics on a referral basis.

The plan would be two-fold. It would allow people to actually get expert acupuncture treatment and it would allow members of the medical society to get the first-hand observation needed for the study of the art. This, I feel, would be of even greater import than the treatment of patients.

INCIDENTALLY, prior to this Victoria Medical Society dinner meeting, I conducted a sort of doctor-in-the-lobby poll. The question was the obvious one—are you in favor of acupuncture study and treatment The tally was unanimous — all in favor, so the old barriers have disappeared. There is a new awareness of what it could mean.

I believe Peter Banks' plan of setting up therapy treatment units is excellent, but I feel it should go further and that government help should be made available to expediate the furtherance.

IT IS OBVIOUS quackery must be kept out of acupuncture treatment. The only way to assure this is for the medical society itself to govern the practitioners.

And the only meaningful way this can be accomplished, would be for the society to set up an acupuncture study clinic at say, UVic. Doctors would be encouraged to take the necessary three or four-year course. That encouragement would include government grants to take care of their enforced layoff from practising their profession and earning their daily bread.

THE GRANTS would have to be in at least the $15,000 to $20,000-a-year bracket and while this might sound like a lot of money for government to be throwing around, surely it would be a drop-in-the-bucket compared with some of the far-out and wasteful government-aid plans foisted on us at the present time.

And the end results would certainly justify the expenditures. We would have fully qualified acupuncture specialists and I can assure the government and the medical society, there would be no shortage of patients.

DR. PETER BANKS says the China trip had a tremendous impact on every one of the 16 Canadians aboard. And while acupuncture, both anaesthetic and therapeutic was the major attraction, Banks also came back full of praise for the Chinese advancements in the field of limb re-implantation. He says the Canadian team witnessed several rather outstanding cases of hands, completely severed, being reimplanted and with remarkable results.

In summation, I feel that finally we might have a breakthrough in the recognition of acupuncture. At least Dr. Peter Banks will be spreading the word and Banks can be a very persuasive advocate.

Peeling Fingernails

Your Good Health

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you possibly tell me why my fingernails peel in layers?

I used to have long nice fingernails but not anymore. They don't just break off at the ends. They break or peel off in layers, halfway up the nail. — L.McC

After examining your nails, and you, I probably would have a much sounder idea of what the cause is.

However, keep these points in mind. The nails are, like the skin, part of the body's covering. Like the skin, they can reflect your general health or an infection or irritation.

From the standpoint of general health, one thinks largely in terms of faulty metabolism (low thyroid activity), insufficient nutrition, particularly of protein and vitamins, or the presence of anemia, particularly an iron-deficiency type of it.

Infection would be revealed by the nature of the scaling and pitting of the nails.

Irritants would include such chemicals as nail polish, remover, or contact with a variety of other common household chemicals—many of these affect some people, don't bother others.

Rather, you should have your doctor (or a dermatologist) evaluate the possible factors in your situation. If you are anemic, building up your blood is important for more reasons than your nails. Faulty thyroid can be effectively treated — if that's the trouble.

If it's nutrition, the use of vitamin B and more protein (other than just gelatin, which is so often recommended) may be the choice.

Barbie says . . .

"IT'S SO MUCH BETTER WITH PHILCO-FORD"

It all started because Joan invited us to have an evening with them at their home . . . Ordinarily the invitation would have been most acceptable . . . except, that the date clashed with an evening that Joe and I had looked forward to staying at home to watch the presentation of the "Oscars" . . . Our TV set is a Majestic, black and white, it's an old set which we know we will very soon have to replace, but unless it goes on the blink, we were looking forward to watching the show from Hollywood . . . We tried hard to think of an excuse for refusing the invitation . . . but Joan was so very forceful and insistent that we visit them that evening, we couldn't refuse . . . Then we remembered our friends' TV set was a bit ancient, too, so we set off for their home with some misgivings . . . We arrived at their place a few minutes before the big show was to commence . . . but when we entered their living room . . . there in a corner of the room was the reason why Joan was so pressing in her invitation . . . for there standing in all its splendour was a brand-new, elegant TV set . . . It didn't take long for Joan's husband to show-off their new acquisition . . . It was a PHILCOMATIC 1 with a 26" picture and it was a Color Set . . . and he quickly demonstrated the PHILCOMATIC tuning system . . . Just select the channel, a push of the PHILCOMATIC button brings into full operation automatic tint, color, and A.T.C. for a beautiful color picture . . . The set is completely transistorized and built into a smart, stylish cabinet . . . He demonstrated the color set to us, just like an expert . . . Then he explained that they had bought the color set from MACDONALD'S FURNITURE MART, 1420 BROAD ST. and that the salesman spent some time with them fully explaining the set to them and how to use it . . . Then, further insisted on coming up to their home to make sure that the set was properly connected up . . . By this time the "Oscars" programme was on the air and I must say, I was astonished by the clarity and beautiful realism of the colors . . . Both Joe and I immediately realized, there and then, that a color set is a must if one wants to enjoy TV and we agreed that we couldn't possibly improve on the PHILCOMATIC with its "hands-off tuning system" . . . for that's what it really is, select your channel, push the PHILCOMATIC button, then keep your hands off . . . Then—we decided to visit MACDONALD'S FURNITURE MART, 1420 BROAD ST. and go in for a PHILCOMATIC COLOR SET.

Information Canada

Agency Made 'Impotent'

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said Thursday night Information Canada had become almost impotent as the results of attacks on it.

"Give it a chance," Munro told members of the Commons broadcasting committee which passed the $10-million budget of the agency over objections of Conservative MPs.

James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) said that when Prime Minister Trudeau established the agency in 1969 he had promised a reduction in government information costs.

Yet the budgets of Information Canada and nine major government departments increased this year, he said. He also charged that Information Canada is only duplicating work of established information sections.

Although approved by the committee, the agency's budget must also be voted on in the Commons. The Conservatives have served notice they will make a concerted effort then to take away the budget with the exception of the government printing service Information Canada operates.

However, remarks made by Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) at the committee indicated the Conservatives won't get the needed support from the NDP.

Joe Clark (PC—Rocky Mountain) caused a slight uproar among Liberal members when he asked agency director Guy d'Avignon if there was any difference between the maple leaf pins distributed by Information Canada and the pins distributed by the Liberals in the last federal election.

Clark also noted that Mel Hurtig, a defeated Liberal candidate in the October, 1972, election, held franchises to handle Information Canada publications.

Souvenir Going Home With Giant Price Tag

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 14th-century Japanese sword brought to the U.S. as booty by a Second World War army colonel, was sold at auction to a Japanese dealer Thursday for a record $70,000.

The 30-inch blade, forged by master swordmaker Aoe Suketsugu in 1312, was sold to Sam Someya of Tokyo and London, who said he would take it back to Japan for registration and possible citation as a national treasure. There are believed to be four other comparable swords in the hands of former American servicemen.

Cruise Dispute Goes to Court

VANCOUVER (CP) — The operators of the Alaskan cruise ship Xanadu applied in B.C. Supreme Court for an injunction to stop picketing of the vessel at wharves in Vancouver harbor.

Chiefs' Meetings Suspended

Peace Team Light Fails

SAIGON (AP) — The Vietnam peacekeeping commission ceased to function Thursday when meetings of delegation chiefs were suspended because of a dispute over procedure.

With the four-country commission further weakened by the impending withdrawal of Canada, new charges of major ceasefire violations were reported.

The Saigon command reported the first Communist tank assault since the ceasefire went into effect Jan. 28, and the Viet Cong charged the U.S. with making new air attacks on the Vietnam side of the border with Cambodia.

The Viet Cong said they would seek a new investigation by the International Commission of Control and Supervision.

Ambassador Michel Gauvin, head of the Canadian delegation, said he would assume the chairmanship of the commission today under the four-country rotating policy. But he said he would call no further meetings until a 10-day dispute over investigative reports was resolved.

While Gauvin stood firm, so did the Hungarian delegation in opposing him. Indonesia backed Canada and Poland supported Hungary in the commission's usual split.

The dispute involves Canadian and Indonesian reports that interviews with Communist prisoners document North Vietnamese infiltration into South Vietnam both before and after the ceasefire.

The Polish and Hungarian delegations blocked consideration of the reports by the commission on grounds that investigation of infiltrations are beyond the commission's mandate.

Meanwhile, the search continued for a successor to Canada, which has given notice it will withdraw by the end of July because the ceasefire and the peacekeeping apparatus have been ineffective.

Austria, France, Italy, the Scandinavian countries, Mexico, Brazil and Malaysia have been mentioned as candidates to succeed Canada. The decision will be made by the four signatories of the peace agreement — the United States, North and South Vietnam, and the Viet Cong.

On the battlefield, Saigon reported three Communist PT76 light amphibious tanks spearheaded an attack across the Bao Nai River 18 miles southwest of Hue and to the east of the A Shau Valley.

Senate Blocks Air War Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted 63 to 19 Thursday to cut off all funds for the bombing of Cambodia, putting both houses of congress on record against continuation of the air war that has raged there since the Indochina ceasefire Jan. 28.

All attempts by administration supporters to block, cripple or delay the measure were turned back by decisive margins. The antiwar amendment, sponsored by Senator Thomas Eagleton, (D—Mo.), then passed the Senate by a lopsided margin in a major defeat for President Nixon's policies.

The vote means that any further bombing in Cambodia will be in defiance of the expressed will of majorities in both the House and Senate.

It could be weeks, however, before the antiwar amendment is sent to the president for his signature or veto.

Pompidou Nearer Summit

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI) — French President Georges Pompidou softened his opposition Thursday to a summit meeting this fall of all U.S. and European allies.

In more than five hours of private talks, President Nixon apparently persuaded Pompidou that such a forum would not be a blow to France's prestige, and that he would not use it for economic blackmail.

Dr. Henry Kissinger, Nixon's chief foreign policy adviser, said he would begin a series of meetings in Paris next Thursday with French Foreign Minister Michel Jobert to determine whether an agreeable "declaration of principles" could be reached.

Ervin Answers Impatient Watergate Probers

No Choice but Wait Some More

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman Sam Ervin Jr. (Dem — N.C.) and a Republican member of his Senate Watergate committee said Thursday they would like to zero in quickly on the central issue — President Nixon's role in the affair — by calling his former aides immediately.

But Ervin said there is no choice but to wait until mid-June to summon two key former White House aides, John Dean and Jeb Stuart Magrud Magruder.

Responding to an appeal by Senator Edward Gurney (R — Fla.) for an end to hearsay testimony, Ervin said in Winston-Salem, N.C., it would be about June 14 before Dean and Magruder could be granted immunity from prosecution to tell their own stories.

"I wish the top-leevl White House officials were available," Ervin said. "If everybody connected with the White House would come out and tell what they know we could find out in a week."

But Ervin noted that the attorney-general has refused to waive a 20-day notice period blocking an immediate order of immunity from chief U.S. District Judge John Sirica.

Senator Robert Dole of Kansas, former Republican national chairman, added his objection to the pace of the committee investigation thus far, saying in a speech at Whippany, N.J.: "I ask that it be no less thorough, no less cautious, no less concerned with detail. But for heaven's sake, let it be spedier — so that we can get this whole affair behind up."

In a lengthy letter to the other six members of the special panel that began televised public hearings May 17, Gurney complained things are going too slowly and not cutting to the heart of the issue: Whether Nixon was involved.

"Thus far, we have had minor witnesses who can shed little real light on the involvement of the president," he said. "However, their testimony has provided huge black headlines charging presidential involvement based solely on hearsay or opinion . . .

"Both the presidency and the nation deserve better than this."

He said the committee could "get to the heart of Watergate" in short order by calling seven one-time Nixon lieutenants — H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, Dean, John Mitchell, Maurice Stans, Herbert Kalmbach and Charles Colson.

Gurney said they should be called beginning next Tuesday, when the hearings resume after a week's recess.

Financier Charged

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — Financier C. Arnholt Smith, a longtime confidante of President Nixon, was charged by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) Thursday along with two associates and six of his firms with securities fraud reaching into the millions of dollars.

Smith, former owner of the San Diego Padres baseball team, a close friend of Nixon since his days in congress and a major contributor to his political campaigns, was accused in a 31-page civil complaint filed in U.S. district court.

The complaint alleged violations of numerous securities laws, primarily that assets of publicly owned firms were spun off to benefit firms held privately by Smith and others.

An SEC spokesman said Smith "was on all sides of the transaction."

Defeat by Frustration

IT IS NOTEWORTHY THAT NEITHER the North Vietnamese nor their communist sympathizers who comprise the Viet Cong have expressed any regret at the Canadian government's decision to quit the International Commission of Control and Supervision.

From other quarters reaction has ranged from disappointment to dismay, and now that it is too late there could be second thoughts about the wisdom of a decision External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp called "firm and definite."

Not that withdrawal from the ICCS is difficult to understand, explain or excuse. From the beginning the Canadian government has expressed grave doubts about the ability of the truce supervisory machinery to function with any real hope of success. The experience of the previous 20 years in a similar peace-keeping role had provided plenty of proof on that point.

But Mr. Sharp and his colleagues in the government have taken a position in conflict with opinions of Canadian military men in the field. Most of them would have preferred to remain, if for no other reason than for the experience they were getting from negotiating with the communists. And there is another reason why the withdrawal announcement may have been ill-advised at this point.

One of the supports for justification of the Canadian decision was the continued violation of the truce by both sides in Vietnam. But violations had been significantly reduced in the past month.

There was, too, the report that positive results had been achieved in the conversations between Washington's Henry Kissinger and Hanoi's Le Duc Tho in Paris. Their intent was the finding of a formula which would discourage breaches of the armistice agreement.

On these grounds, it has been observed, Canada becomes open to criticism for an action that undermines the flimsy peace structure.

Despatches from Saigon mention the assumption among officials there that domestic political pressures prompted the Canadians to quit. If that is so they are still below the surface. There is no evidence of any change in basic policy which committed this country to peace-keeping roles in Cyprus and the Congo, for example. But now there may be some doubts about it. The credibility of the nation may have been injured.

"We have served in more peace-keeping and peace observer roles than any other country," Mr. Sharp boasted when announcing withdrawal from the ICCS in the Commons, "and we remain ready to serve wherever we can be effective." He has given up hope, apparently, that in Vietnam Canadians can any longer be effective.

Canada has been defeated by frustration, it might be said. But it is a defeat nevertheless, and in that sense damaging to the whole concept of international control of areas of stress. Withdrawal from Vietnam may have been precipitate.

Wider Still and Wider

THE TIME WAS NOT LONG AGO when the Canadian government's aim was a 12-mile exclusive fishing zone from straight, promontory-to-promontory base lines along the coasts and, in addition, some kind of conservation control out to the far edges of the continental shelves. The 12-mile zone has been achieved, through unilateral declaration and negotiated agreements with other countries. But now Canada is not seeking merely the authority to govern conservation on the shelves. According to Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, this country will strive to win international acceptance of a 200-mile exclusive fishing zone—and in places, more.

In a speech to a Liberal association in St. Andrews, New Brunswick, which resulted in Newfoundland Conservative John Lundrigan calling him a liar for claiming the Tories wanted only a 50-mile limit, Mr. Davis made his position on the national fishing grounds plain. At the next United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea, he said, "we will join forces with the world's other 'coastal states.' We will go, flat out, for an exclusive fishing zone which will include the fringes of our continental shelf."

Present indications, the minister said, were that a 200-mile limit would be popular in most quarters, and Canada would go for it, of course, but with one important qualification. Where the continental margin "reaches out more than 200 miles from shore, it is the continental margin which will form our fishing limit . . ." Thus, he explained, the "extended fishing limit" on the west coast with its narrow shelf would be 200 miles out, but that "at the farthest point, our continental margin (which includes the continental slope as well as the continental shelf) reaches out roughly 400 miles into the North Atlantic," including all of the Grand Bank and Flemish Cap.

Mr. Davis denied that this was new policy, but his repeated references to an exclusive fishing zone and extended fishing limits were in contrast to earlier mentions of coastal-state authority to govern the exploitation of fish stocks. Canada's representatives at the UN law of the sea conference may therefore be in for a tougher fight than if they were only seeking acceptance of conservation control, or international fishing on the high seas according to the rules of the coastal states concerned.

But the minister is full of confidence. Most underdeveloped countries are coastal states, he notes, and they are becoming increasingly alarmed about the depletion of their fish stocks by a few long-distance fishing nations. These few nations "are bound to be outvoted" at the conference.

They are a formidable array, however, including the nations with the biggest muscles—the United States, Britain, Japan, and the Soviet Union. But whether Mr. Davis is over-optimistic or not, Canada will lose nothing by seeking wider fishing zones, and certainly will hasten the day of more effective control of fishing far off the coasts.

Hospital Rates

There appears to be a conflict of social theory and practice in the provincial government's consideration of extended care hospital rates.

Mr. Cocke has informed us, via an address to a medical convention recently, that extended care rates may increase from $1 to $5.50 a day. He tells us also that "most" of the extended care patients receive the $200 monthly guaranteed income — and that charging such people $5.50 daily would still leave them "about $40 per month" for sundry expenses.

Unless my arithemetic is faulty, I suggest that a 31day-month at $5.50 daily results in $170.50 plus the $10 laundry fee charged by hospitals. This leaves the patient $19.50 a month — less than 65 cents a day to meet his personal needs.

This princely sum is deemed reasonable by our government, seemingly. The same government pays its ministers handsome salaries and looks to donating millions to other countries. Foreign aid should be a federal responsibility. Domestic aid should be one of the prime responsibilities of a province.

The "corporate rip-off" theme so dear to the NDP is a hard one to resolve, but the rip-off by the sick and elderly is handled with ease. The latter can't fight back. They'll probably squander their 65 cents a day on toothpaste, cigarettes and such, so why worry?

Wartime Controls

The government at Ottawa tells us, ad nauseam, that price and wage controls cannot be made to work. If that's true, then someone was fooling me pretty badly during World War Two!

Convicts Better Fed

May I request publication of the following comments on your editorial, Sudden Change of Pace.

To begin with I refute the comment that "no one is likely to protest the actions of the government lest they be accused of envy." Were I to protest as strongly as I feel, I know it would never be printed.

I'm sure Mr. Barrett's ministers will be delighted with an increase of salary from a miserable $26,000 to a mere $42,000, and the $14,000 filched from the pockets of the long-suffering taxpayer is a small item in a 1.72 billion dollar budget.

My heart bleeds for all the poor un-civil servants, inefficient and vastly overstaffed as they are, who cannot live on $750 wage per month, and will now receive a 10 per cent to 60 per cent increase.

Perhaps now our federal government will be as generous and open-handed with the thousands of poverty-ridden widows and widowers who are too old or sick to work and too young for old age pensions. They are trying to keep a home over their heads on an income far below the government poverty line. I am a widow and my monthly pension is $106.11. Perhaps I may be forgiven if I am envious when I read in the paper that criminals in prison can eat food every day that has not been on my table for more than four years.

Perhaps one may also be forgiven the sin of envy of the affluence of others, when one has to watch the hard-earned savings of a lifetime, rapidly dwindling to inflation. One thing I am sure of — the many lonely, often hungry people who are trying to exist on a miserable pittance less than that given to some welfare recipients, who have never done an honest day's work and never intend to (see recent item by Gorde Hunter on a group of hippies in Saanich) will forgive me for speaking out on their behalf.

Crimes With Guns

Like many other people I am perturbed at the number of crimes committed with the aid of weapons. I am also a sportsman who believes in the right to carry arms. I fail to understand how any registration of firearms can prevent crime in any way.

To my way of thinking the answer lies with the fact that our judges are so busy listening to money-hungry lawyers bleating about the fine points of law that they neglect to administer justice.

As far as I am concerned, any person who commits a crime while carrying a firearm should automatically qualify for ten years hard labor without any fancy parole or time off to go home to see his wife. Let's stop listening to those long haired do-gooders who yap about rehabilitation of the poor, hard done by criminals A prison is a place of punishment so let's make it so.

An Appearance of Serenity

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

It has to be a measure of Conservative Leader Stanfield's talents as a diplomat or conciliator that all appears reasonably serene in the ranks of the official Opposition. At least on the surface.

The situation has been made-to-order for personality clashes with Mr. Stanfield smoothly melding in some of his bright new parliamentary stars with the veterans.

The new boys had little more going for them than glittering reputations won in fields other than Parliament.

The vets had years of loyal party service and Commons experience.

* * *

There could have been open resentments as Mr. Stanfield mixed them — as equals — perhaps even personal hostilities.

But if there were, they have been cleverly concealed.

But since show folk are notoriously temperamental it might be expected that politicians, too, have hyper-sensitive feelings.

But if any Conservative egos have been wounded, the bleeding has been in private.

* * *

And look at some of those who sit behind, in rows two and three.

Jack Horner, a recognized regional western Conservative leader; Erik Nielsen of the Yukon who has haunted the scandal-scarred Liberals for years with his crime exposes; James McGrath, and John Lundrigan from Newfoundland, both aggressive, effective and ambitious; Prince Edward Island's Heath MacQuarrie, who for years has made foreign affairs his specialty; New Brunswick's Tom Bell, with 20 years in the Commons, the last five of them as Whip; and Nova Scotia veterans Robert Coates, one of the deadliest of the Tory in-fighters, Lloyd Crouse, Robert Muir and Donald MacInnis, stout warriors all.

And those are not all of the veterans who have long, loyal, faithful and consistent election-winning service going for them.

But there they are, sitting behind the bright new stars who, in their front-row seats, could be seen to have the jump on cabinet portfolios if and when Mr. Stanfield ever leads back the Conservatives to the power and the glory of office.

The rivalry — and there must be competition for position, even if pretty well concealed — between the new and the old hands, can most easily be seen in two side-by-side seats in the Tory front row.

There sit Marcel Lambert of Edmonton, a 16-year veteran of the Commons, former Speaker and until now, his party's sole financial critic — and James Gillies, the new MP from Don Valley, former head of York University's business school and the Ontario Economic Council, the Conservatives' other financial critic.

* * *

Old hand Lambert and new boy Gillies both have told friends there is really no competition between them. But only one can end up as finance minister if the Tories should form a government, and they both know it.

The two men insist the job is too big for one man.

But both have been quoted that, open or concealed competition or not, the odd irritation does occur.

Although they sit side by side they still seldom appear to talk to each other, much less consult, at least in the Commons.

If being financial critic is too big a job for one man as they claim, they have managed to split it rather unequally.

Marcel Lambert tends to take care of the more detailed stuff relating to government accounting and spending.

James Gillies, who is on a first-name basis with most Canadian financial leaders, deals more in general economic policies.

Washington Calling

The Amazing Chou En-lai

By MARQUIS CHILDS
from Peking

In the silence of the sleeping city in the solemn quiet of a large, brightly lighted conference room in the Great Hall of the People this amazing man talks of the past, present and future. Premier Chou En-lai speaks with the unassuming confidence, the sureness of self and the selfless goals beyond personal destiny that have seen him through adventures enough to fill a dozen lives.

In a discussion of nearly three and a half hours, beginning shortly before 11 o'clock at night, he talks about the ships of the Soviet fleet that passed through the Taiwan Strait, about the developing relationship with the United States, about the perfidy of the Soviet Union, the Watergate affair, China's cultural revolution, his friendship with Henry Kissinger, America's role in Europe, the bombing of Cambodia. Although his voice is seldom raised, the gestures of his sensitive hands give eloquent emphasis to his major points.

* * *

The preliminary to such a meeting is familiar. We are alerted in the early evening to expect a call to go to the Great Hall of the People, about 10 minutes from the Peking Hotel. As we enter the conference room he comes in from another door, and again this is familiar, to greet us.

Yet, anticipated as the formality is, the presence of this slight man in the grey Mao suit, looking younger than his 75 years, is a stunning surprise. For Chou En-lai is the living embodiment of the turbulent, agonizing, slashing rebirth of the most populous nation in the world.

The son of a high mandarin family, he joined the revolution early after a brilliant career in the Whampoa Military Academy in Canton. A former associate of Chiang Kai-shek when Chiang had formed an alliance with the Communist party, Chou fought in the early battles under Chiang against the forces bent on destroying the "Red bandits."

Later joining the revolutionary forces under Mao Tse-tung, he was one of the survivors of the 6,000-mile-long march to the retreat in northwest China where the first Chinese Soviets were established. This epic band endured the snows of high mountain passes, hunger, fierce heat, constant assault from Chiang's troops and those of regional war lords. They crossed the boiling Yangtze River on a high cable suspension bridge from which the planks had been removed by the attacking force in the belief this would stop them.

In the quiet of the Great Hall his past is like a film out of another age. Administering an extraordinary range of detail in every area of government, the premier drives himself as hard as ever he did.

About midway in our discussion he brought up Watergate. Why, he asked, laughing, must there be a Watergate? Some people, he felt, were making use of it for ulterior purposes. He was not interested in the question of Watergate. Serious political talks should not depend on that sort of thing. These things are quite common at times like these in the rivalry between political parties. And, he wanted to know, could we be sure that the same sort of thing might not happen again in future elections?

* * *

An optimist on the developing relationship between Peking and Washington, he sees the establishment of missions of the two nations in their respective capitals as an encouraging forward step.

Several times Chou cited the communique signed in Shanghai at the end of President Nixon's visit in February, 1972, and particularly the sentence stating that the Chinese living on both sides of the Taiwan Strait were Chinese, and both sides agree there is only one China. He attributed this sentence to Kissinger.

Reverting to the policy of John Foster Dulles, he said it was an error to assume that Dulles hoped to restore Chiang Kai-shek to the mainland. His goal, according to Chou, was to establish a claim to separate nationhood for Taiwan. To this the People's Republic was implacably opposed.

* * *

For that reason his government had made no effort to drive the Chiang troops off the offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu that had been one of Dulles's constant preoccupations. Those islands are still occupied and they are shelled every other day, although the shelling is often symbolic. Quemoy and Matsu are Chiang's link to the mainland, a refutation of the claim to separate nationhood.

Following columns will give more of this far-ranging discussion. But so extensive was it that one must confess it can at best be suggestive of what was a sweeping review of the world as seen by the man who, with the sanction of Mao Tse-tung, directs the affairs of this vast land.

The resignation of V. M. Molotov as Soviet foreign minister was announced 17 years ago today—in 1956. He had been foreign minister from 1939 to 1949, and from 1953 to his resignation. Nikita Khrushchev denounced Molotov as a saboteur of peace in 1957 and he became ambassador to Outer Mongolia.

Bahamas Unity Threatened On the Eve of Independence

By DEREK INGRAM in London and JOHN MARQUIS in Abaco, Bahamas

The spectre of Anguilla, the tiny Caribbean island that declared independence in 1969 and was taken over by British troops, is reappearing this time in the 300-island Bahamas group which on July 10 ceases to be a British colony and becomes the independent Commonwealth of the Bahamas Islands.

Forces are again at work to separate part of the Bahamas group, the islands known as Abaco, from the control of the Nassau government led by Prime Minister Lynden Pindling.

About 6,500 of the Bahamas' 300,000 people live in the Abaco group — around 52 per cent black and 47 per cent white. The group has been part of the Bahamas since the 18th century and it was not until 1968 that a movement arose for a "Free Abaco."

The movement wanted Abaco to remain a British colony or to become a separate associated state after Bahamian independence.

When independence talks were held last December a group of islanders went to London as an unofficial deputation. The British government rejected their demands for a separate Abaco and the group abandoned the idea of secession.

But in the last few weeks some of the agitators seem to have been stirred up again by private individuals in Britain and the U.S.

* * *

Abaco may have become a target for American speculators in much the same way as did Anguilla. In Anguilla they wanted to set up casinos and a variety of dubious establishments.

The Abaco threat is embarrassing to Britain which wants to hand over the Bahamas peacefully on July 10, all the constitutional arrangements having now been worked out. Prince Charles will attend the independence celebrations. Britain has no wish to be left with a troublesome little colony like Abaco on its hands.

Pindling is worried, though outwardly confident that in the end nothing untoward will occur. Only 14 of the Bahamas' 1,000 policemen are in Abaco and he has not reinforced them. But he admits that the threat is there, and he flew unexpectedly to London to discuss the problem with British ministers.

Pindling has little means of combatting a secessionist move by force. He has no army, and if he is really in trouble it would be difficult for Britain to refuse a request after independence for help from the warships it keeps in Caribbean waters and which visit the Bahamas every two or three months.

There are constitutional differences between the Anguilla and Abaco situations. Anguilla was part of the associated state of St. Kitt-Nevis and Britain is responsible for its defence and foreign affairs. After July 10 the Bahamas will be fully independent and Britain could only intervene there at Pindling's request.

The leaders of revolt in Abaco itself are one of its two MPs, Errington Watkins, and businessman Charles "Chuck" Hall. They have formed a Council for a Free Abaco. Pindling says that they are simply front men for American lawyer Edwin Marger and arms broker Mitchell WerBell.

Both men have recently visited Britain. One man in Britain who has supported Free Abaco is the right wing Conservative MP, Ronald Bell. He tried unsuccessfully in the House of Commons to amend the Bahamas Independence Bill so that Abaco could remain a British colony.

* * *

At his press conference in London Pindling called the whole movement "the biggest land grab ever tried in the Bahamas." He does not believe that the voters of Abaco support the idea of secession, but he admits that it is possible that arms have been moved into the islands.

As Independence Day approaches, Abaconians are signing a second petition expressing their determination to stay British. In 1971 they petitioned the Queen urging her to ensure the Union Jack flutters over the Island for ever more. Their latest petition will go to MPs and the House of Lords.

Accord in Africa Omen for Ottawa?

By ROD CURRIE
From London

The measure of accord apparent at the recently concluded meeting of the Organization of African Unity is being hailed — admittedly with some caution — as a good omen for progress at the Commonwealth conference in Ottawa in August.

It isn't that the African leaders' meeting in Ethiopia made such startling progress, but they avoided outright confrontation on a number of touchy agenda items that observers had warned might split the meeting.

On non-Commonwealth affairs, the squabble over territorial claims between Ethiopia and Somalia continues unresolved as does Libya's demand that the OAU secretariat be moved out of the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa.

But the showpiece of the final communique was the unexpected agreement between Gen. Idi Amin of Uganda and President Nyerere of Tanzania, both Commonwealth countries. Ethiopia's Emperor Haile Selassie was give full credit for bringing the two together, after five days of mediation.

* * *

It was the first time they had met since Dr. Milton Obote was deposed as Ugandan president in 1971, after an army coup led by Amin, and fled to Tanzania.

Observers suggested that the mercurial Amin must have wanted the agreement since Obote gave him every excuse for refusing to meet with Nyerere if that had been his wish.

On the eve of the Amin-Nyerere meeting, Obote broke his long silence with a statement accusing Amin of killing at least 80,000 people in Uganda during the last two years.

The effect was of extreme embarrassment to Nyerere, who had been adopting a more relaxed attitude toward Uganda.

Nevertheless, Amin and Nyerere went ahead with the agreement under which they adopted a position of reconciliation and future co-operation.

If Amin's conciliatory attitude persists — and some are doubtful that it will — it could take some pressure off the Commonwealth leaders meeting in Ottawa.

British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home said recently he saw no major problems for the Commonwealth conference, except possibly over Uganda's expulsion without compensation of Asian citizens and British business interests.

* * *

Many observers suggest that if Amin's apparent new conciliatory attitude continues it will make for a far more amiable meeting in Ottawa. Still, some remain skeptical.

Roy Lewis, writing in The Sunday Times of London, says it is no secret the Canadian government hopes Amin will not accept its invitation to the Commonwealth meeting.

The general theory is that much depends on Amin — if he shows up in Ottawa and continues to be agreeable, then the conference will have more time for the subjects Prime Minister Trudeau has proposed for the agenda.

It could, some observers in London say, mean a new-style, constructive Commonwealth conference as opposed to the Singapore meeting which got bogged down over the Rhodesia situation.

It is said in London that Trudeau wants a conference marked by private and frank discussions with no press leaks that would encourage leaders to address their remarks more to the folks back home than to their fellow Commonwealth leaders.

Citizens Demand Right to Sunshine

By ELIZABETH POND
from Tokyo

Do citizens have a legal right to sunshine? Some aroused homeowners' organizations think so. So do several Japanese courts and the Tokyo city government.

For a Japan increasingly smothered by industrial pollution and supermegalopolis, an assertion of sunlight rights might seem rash. Nonetheless, Japan is pushing ahead in its pioneer concept.

In Tokyo, the People's Confederation of Construction Hazards Countermeasures reports some success in resisting the inroads of the highrises on Tokyo's typical one- and two-storey wood or plaster houses. Through the end of March, a spokesman said, this citizens' group has caused 82 cancellations of planned highrises, 220 revisions of plans, and 91 cases of monetary compensation for neighbors who would be deprived of sunlight by new construction.

Currently the group is collecting signatures to petition the Tokyo government to outlaw buildings higher than 7.5 metres (two low storeys) without the approval of three-fourths of nearby residents. In their fight, protesting homeowners have been aided by several court decisions in the past year favoring sunlight plaintiffs.

Now the local governments are getting into the act by trying to regulate the minimum amount of sunlight that new structures must still let fall on existing buildings.

The port of Yokohama moved first, requiring all buildings erected after the first of this year to allow nearby residences at least two to four hours of sunlight daily, depending on the zoning.

This month Kanagawa prefecture (south of Tokyo) also banned construction of any new building more than 10 metres (three storeys) high without the prior approval of residents who would be shaded from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on the winter solstice.

The Tokyo city government, too — long an environmental champion — intends to establish a standard for "civil minimum of sunlight," this summer.

A specialists' advisory council commissioned by the city government made its initial report in February, saying "the right to sunlight is a fundamental right of the people." This basic right should be respected, said the report, even if construction of tall buildings in Tokyo becomes "stagnant."

Digging Bomb Shelters National Obsession

Chinese Go Underground

By CARL MOLLINS, from Shanghai

The garden area in the forecourt of the Long Hua hospital has been demolished and the whole place is a mess.

"We are digging a protection channel," is the way the head doctor's explanation comes through an interpreter.

"Protection channel," means "bomb shelter" and digging them has become a national obsession in China.

When the Long Hua doctor said "We are digging," he was interpreted literally. The entire hospital staff, including top surgeons, all take a regular hand at the digging, visitors were told.

* * *

"There are one million Russian troops on our northern border," was the explanation given by one Chinese for the tunnelling campaign.

Elsewhere the pattern is similar. The ground floor of a department store on Nanking Road near the Shanghai waterfront is in temporary upheaval, counters displaced by mounds of earth as staff take turns digging a hole beneath the foundations.

In the old Ta Sha Lan district of central Peking, there is a clothing store where they will show you how a whole section of floor opens up to a stairway leading into a labyrinth about 30 feet below.

* * *

A common sight in China's cities are lineups of big concrete arches along the streets. The arches are being used to roof tunnels dug somewhere nearby.

Peking's new, 15-mile subway line across the capital from east to west, currently being augmented by a loop circling the inner city, is said by the Chinese to be bombproof.

Chinese officials make no secret of the tunnelling program, nor of the official reasons for the program — fear of nuclear attack from Russia.

Foreigners, for example, have been taken down into completed bomb shelters. The one under the Ta Sha Lan clothing store was shown to be a narrow single-file passage with washrooms and other rooms opening off the main corridor.

That one and others appear to be as much evacuation routes as air-raid shelters. There is speculation that the plan involves linking up various tunnels to provide an underground escape route to city suburbs.

* * *

Foreigners who have visited tunnels were unable to judge whether the ventilation systems would be effective for long periods or how any nuclear radiation might be screened out.

Outsiders are likewise unsure just how seriously the Chinese leadership takes the threat of nuclear attack, or whether the tunnelling campaign is as much a demonstration designed to impress the Russians and other foreigners and perhaps to unify the populace in common cause against external danger.

Officially, and clearly on the part of the diggers, the danger is proclaimed as a real one.

* * *

Like so many other activities in Chinese life, the tunnelling campaign is guided by a 1969 proclamation by Chairman Maso Tse-tung after border battles with the Russians:

"Dig tunnels deep, store grain everywhere, never seek conquest."

The tunnelling and the order to disperse food stores fit in with Mao's claim long ago that the Chinese people could withstand and survive even all-out nuclear war.

Bathtub Entries Now 17

Organizers of the Oak Bay Tea Party Saturday and Sunday say there are now 17 entries in for the bathtub race off Willows Beach Sunday afternoon.

In addition, the opening parade, starting from Windsor Park at 10 a.m. Saturday, has attracted 45 entries to make it the biggest yet. A number of organizations within the municipality are offering trophies to the best parade entries in a number of categories.

Other program highlights will include Roger Foley's skydivers, a jet powerboat demonstration, and the water ski-kite flying of Brian Thompson.

Train-Car Brush Tab $150

A train-car collision, a rare event in Victoria, occurred Thursday afternoon on the Smith Cedar Products Ltd. property at 651 Harbour but resulted in minor damage and no injuries.

Victoria police said Wayne Coey, 22, of 1022 Fairfield, had been making deliveries at the mill and was backing his car across railroad tracks on the property when he saw a freight train backing down the tracks toward him.

Coey pulled ahead but was unable to clear the tracks because of the company's office. The train caught the right rear of the car and dragged it a short distance — enough to allow Coey to drive the car clear. Damage was estimated at $150 to his car and nothing to the train.

No police action was planned.

Jack Dayton, 41, a teacher in the Greater Victoria school district for eight years before becoming vice-principal of Colquitz junior high school in 1970, has been appointed principal of that school effective next September.

Dayton succeeds Jack Drummond, who has been transferred to Oak Bay junior high after 11 years at Colquitz.

Appointment of Dayton comes at the end of a province-wide competition which boiled down to five finalists.

Accused's Girlfriend Testifies

Scuffle Ended in Shooting

A rolling scuffle on a living-room floor resulted in the shooting of Charles Scarr, a B.C. Supreme Court jury in the attempted murder trial of John Howard McGee was told Thursday.

McGee's girl friend, Marilyn Gow, also testified that she was carrying a loaded derringer in the accused's Esquimalt home before the shooting incident, because she was "scared" of what might happen.

McGee, 27, of 819 Condor, is charged with attempting to murder Scarr on the early morning of Jan. 23.

The weapon was a .38-calibre revolver, which McGee kept in his bedside table along with one bullet.

Miss Gow told the court that she had come out of her bedroom for a third time that night in an effort to tone down a noisy conversation between Scarr, McGee and another man, Larry Shaw.

She said Scarr pushed her aside, apparently unaware that she was holding a loaded .22 derringer in the folds of her nightclothes.

She moved to the background to talk with Shaw.

"Charles (Scarr) and John (McGee) were standing together at the bedroom door. Immediately after that I heard Charlie say something like 'Let me see it' and the next thing I knew, the two of them were on the living-room floor.

"I heard the shot and jumped up and heard John say, 'Shoot him, shoot him.' At the time I had the derringer pointed to the floor."

Miss Gow said that after Shaw grabbed the derringer from her, she saw the front door was open and Scarr was missing. "I heard John screaming to phone an ambulance, phone police."

Crown prosecutor Ted Pollard asked her why, if she was scared of the two visitors, didn't she demand that McGee ask them to leave.

"I didn't think of asking him anything. I just went back to bed," she said.

"Did it ever occur to you to telephone police?" Pollard asked. She answered no.

Then Pollard said: "But you had enought fear to load a derringer."

Another witness Thursday, gunsmith Gilbert Carmichael, told defence lawyer Cecil Branson that for a bullet to enter a body at 45 degrees, the firearm would have to be held close to the body, and tipped down, if two men of similar height are facing one another.

(Earlier medical testimony has indicated that the bullet in Scarr's stomach entered at an angle.)

The trial is expected to end today.

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department came under fire Thursday for leaving four of its destroyers tied up at the docks.

Opposition members in the Commons defence and external affairs committee were commenting on a statement by Defence Minister James Richardson that Canada may sell four destroyers because of manning problems.

Richardson made the statement earlier this week and George Hees (PC—Prince Edward Hastings), Doug Rowland (NDP—Selkirk) and T. C. Douglas (NDP—Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) pursued it Thursday.

The minister repeated that the armed forces do not have enough men to keep on active service the destroyers St. Laurent, Fraser and Ottawa, stationed in Halifax, and the St. Croix in Esquimalt.

Richardson told James Walker (L—York Centre) that selling the ships to a foreign power is not the only option open to the government. They could be scrapped or they could be put in a "lower form of reserve." At present they are in reserve on 30-day recall.

Sharp Asks Zambians For Clearer Report

OTTAWA (UPI) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Thursday there were "serious discrepancies" between the official Zambian account and eyewitness reports of the shooting of two Canadian girls.

Sharp said he was pressing the Zambian government for a "more satisfactory response" to the shooting May 15 of two Canadian girls visiting Victoria Falls on the Zambia-Rhodesia border.

The letter he received from Zambian Foreign Minister E. H. K. Mudenda, made public Wednesday, "leaves a good deal to be desired," Sharp said.

Conservative party spokesman Claude Wagner said Canada should make the "strongest objections to Zambia, perhaps through the United Nations. He questioned the continuation of programs under which Zambian police and military officers are trained in Canada.

New Democratic Party spokesman Doug Rowland, however, said the government should not allow the incident to interfere with relations at a time when Zambia is struggling with the "racist state" of Rhodesia. He said the government should press for facts and then ask for an official apology and compensation, if warranted.

Sharp spoke in the House of Commons after receiving a report from A. M. Leith, first secretary of the Canadian high commission in Lusaka, who visited the scene of the shooting to make arrangements for return of the girls' bodies and seek facts about the incident.

Sharp said Leith reported:

"International press reports at that time were reasonably accurate.

"There was no evidence of any provocation for the incident" so far as he could determine.

"There was no evidence that either of the two Canadian girls had been in the water; and the Rhodesian police report on Miss Sinclair's clothing confirmed no evidence of water on her shoes or trousers.

"There was no evidence that any member of the party was carrying bandoliers or wearing waterproof gear.

"There was evidence that more than one gun was used, and an examination of spent bullets and bullet marks indicated that the shooting had been directed to three locations on the Rhodesian side."

The initial Zambian communique on the incident said the girls were shot because Zambian soldiers thought they were planning to attack a Zambian power station.

Sharp said he was not satisfied by the Zambian explanations either in Mudenda's letter or in an interview between the Zambian minister and Canadian High Commissioner A. Broadbridge.

"The information given to Mr. Leith by the eyewitnesses on the Rhodesian side to whom he spoke revealed some serious discrepancies in regard to the Zambian version," Sharp said.

He said the only Zambian response had been Mudenda's letter expressing regret for the incident.

"I have instructed our high commissioner to continue to press the Zambian government for a more satisfactory response. When I have received further information from the Zambian authorities, I will be in a position to advise the House further," Sharp said.

Victorians Win Doctoral Grants

Thirteen Victorians are included in the list of 838 successful candidates for first awards in the Canada Council's annual doctoral fellowships competition, just made public in Ottawa.

The award winners were chosen from a field of 2,437 qualified students in the humanities and social sciences after a screening process which included assessments by special committees at Canadian universities and by 11 committees of specialists named by the Canada Council.

Worth between $3,500 and $5,500 each, the fellowships go to train Canadians for careers in university teaching and research in the humanities and social sciences.

Musical Ride on Ferry

Live music will be provided for travellers on B.C. ferries between Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland during the summer, Transportation Minister Robert Strachan announced Thursday.

A variety of musical groups will begin playing for about eight hours a day on June 25 on runs between Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay, and Horseshoe Bay and Nanaimo.

A similar program began on the Kelsey Bay-Prince Rupert run Thursday, said Strachan.

Also beginning June 25, a piper will greet travellers at each of the four Vancouver Island-Lower Mainland terminals.

The musical programs will continue daily for 11 weeks, he said, at a total cost of between $30,000 and $40,000. All the musical groups involved will be union groups and will be paid union wages.

Some of the individuals and groups, he said, would be "troubadors" strolling around the ferry, playing as they went. Others would set up their instruments in one section of the ferry and play there.

A trial run with a Victoria group last week met with "widespread public approval," said the minister, which was why the government had decided to go ahead for the whole summer. His department had received many phone calls and letters encouraging such a program, he added.

All the groups have not yet been selected by the government and some auditions were still being held. Any group that wished to audition could apply to the government, he said, but all musicians chosen would be from B.C.

New Channel To Boost Reservoir

In spite of soaring capital costs, the Council Creek diversion into the Sooke Lake reservoir will be built, the Greater Victoria water board decided Thursday.

Construction of the dam, pipelines and ditches to divert 1.5 billion gallons of water a year is expected to cost about $220,000.

Last year, the cost was estimated at about $100,000.

The Sooke Lake reservoir has a capacity to serve 250,000 people. That figure is expected to be reached by 1980 at which time the Council Creek diversion would become an absolute necessity.

Mother of Three Boys Loses $455 in Cash

Connie Jewitt of 609 Mary and her three young sons will have a lean month if she doesn't get back the $455 she lost Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Jewitt, 31, said she had cashed her welfare cheque which included payment for work on an incentive program, at Burnside and Tillicum.

About 4:30 p.m. on the way home she stopped to buy meat near the junction of Gorge and Tillicum and noticed she had lost her wallet.

She told the welfare department about the loss.

"The welfare said it was my tough luck. They said it was none of their business after the cheque has been cashed," she said.

Asked what she plans to do if the money is not found she said, "I suppose I'll have to get a loan."

Veteran Mentor Retires

After more than a quarter of a century at Esquimalt high school, principal Roy Temple will attend his last graduation ceremony there tonight.

Temple first went to the school as a teacher in 1946, and has remained there since, first in the old building now occupied by Highrock junior high, and latterly in the Colville Road school.

He retires at the end of this school year.

Also tonight, Victoria high school will hold its graduation ceremonies, with Peter Smith, dean of Fine Arts at the University of Victoria as guest speaker.

Reynolds high school graduation ceremonies were held last week, and other area schools will be holding ceremonies in the near future.

Expert Lauds Sex Role in General Health

By CLAUDE ADAMS
Colonist Reporter

Doctors must begin to appreciate the importance of sex and sexual problems in the general health of their patients, and the taking of "sexual histories" might be one good step in this direction, says an American population and family planning expert.

Dr. Lester Lifton, in Victoria to attend a conference of Canadian medical students, said that getting this data may have an importance equal to that of medical histories in diagnosing an illness.

"The average doctor may be thrown a bit off balance when the subject of sex is raised," said Lifton, of the Centre for the Advancement of Population Studies in Medicine based in Williamsville, N.Y.

'Medical Profession Will Charge'

"He feels uncomfortable with non-specific complaints."

A new openness about sex, he said, will serve to erode the Victorian attitude of: "Do it in the dark and wash your hands afterwards."

The change in attitude among the medical profession will come, through a change in their learning curricula at medical schools, he adds.

In what respect is today's medical student lacking?

- First, he has only a "rough idea" of basic physiology, the intricate makeup of the human body;
- Second, he is in the dark on the subject of human sexual response: what happens when two people have intercourse?
- Third, he knows the mechanics of family planning but is unable to discuss a patient's sexual history on such "taboo" topics as orgasms.
- Fourth, when he becomes a practising doctor, he lacks the ability to use paraprofessionals, like nurses. "There is no reason why a doctor has to take the time to insert, for example, intra-uterine devices (IUDs)," Lifton said. "But he is still very jealous of his supreme power."

The four-day National Conference of Canadian Medical Students, held at the Eric Martin Institute, is aimed at jarring students into returning to their schools and pressing for a stronger accent on sex and family planning in their courses.

Lifton told the Colonist that the doctor must once again be ready to take up his traditional role in his community; in effect, to be a leader and set its "tone."

For example, he should be ready to take a strong stand on the whole question of sex education in school.

Unfortunately, he said, the doctor probably has as many hangups about sex as his patients, and thus tends to brush over the subject.

Switching to one of his related concerns, Lifton said that Canada has as much of a population problem as the U.S. However, it's a problem not of numbers but of distribution.

"We have too many people to enjoy a full and satisfying life," he said, referring to packed urban areas. "And Canada has a higher growth rate than the U.S."

He said the myth of the "large happy family" is a false one, by most psychological and developmental yardsticks.

Lifton added that the U.S. (as well as some parts of Canada) is already slightly below the replacement level—sometimes called Zero Population Growth—but it will take 70 years or one average lifetime to take affect and curb actual growth.

Insurance Slams Utter 'Nonsense'

Transportation Minister Robert Strachan Thursday accused Liberal leader David Anderson and Conservative leader Derril Warren of "spouting absolute nonsense" in their comments about government car insurance.

Strachan confirmed that no one in B.C. will pay more for car insurance than they are now once the government plan comes into effect next March. That meant everyone's total premiums would be less, even though there would be a driver's premium in addition to the ordinary vehicle insurance policy premium.

He was responding to comments made by Anderson and Warren who had accused the NDP of reneging on election promises which had promised substantial reductions in automobile insurance premiums for all B.C. drivers.

The minister said the two politicians were only trying to "collect brownie points" by the statements, and the people knew that the NDP was keeping its promise since no one would pay more for insurance under the government scheme, scheduled to begin next March.

Three Guilty In Fake Raid

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A former police lieutenant and two civilians have been found guilty of staging a fake drug raid and taking $30,000 in blackmail from five college students.

The criminal court jury found the three guilty of blackmail and conspiracy charges Wednesday.

The prosecution alleged that the defendants lured five University of Pennsylvania students into buying 50 pounds of fake hashish in October, 1971, and then raided the students. The students paid $30,000 to keep the raiders from pressing charges, the prosecution said.

Spiral Continues To Lower Level

The NYSE index lost .53 to 55.42.

Analysts said the rally effort was a technical reaction to recent losses.

Investor concern over the fate of the U.S. dollar, Watergate, inflation, and the economic outlook also pushed prices lower analysts said.

In the news background, the government reported that factory orders had dropped in April for the first time in six months. A few days ago it reported that its composite index of leading economic indicators also declined in April, for the first time in 2½ years.

B.C. Realtor on Housing Crunch:

All Governments To Blame

VANCOUVER (CP) — A private builder-developer Thursday criticized all three levels of government because of the present housing shortage in B.C.

"Cost of housing has risen at an astronomical rate," Arthur Block, chairman of the board of Block Bros. Industries Ltd., told the company's annual meeting.

"Prudent surplus has disappeared and vacancies are nil. Demand is growing and supply is diminishing.

"Surely in a country where we have under-employment of labor and ample supply of materials, such a condition is indefensible."

Block said municipal governments must take a large measure of blame "for putting roadblocks in the way of developments."

"They have taken an extremely negative view toward housing, suggesting that others bear the unwanted tax burden," he said.

"Their negative attitude has been particularly damaging to the lower income brackets — for example, the rejection of mobile home parks, resisting social housing and the smaller lot concepts."

Block said the provincial government has not been helpful either.

"Concurrent with the land act, greater attention should be given to the immediate supply of building lots," he said.

"First, a concerted effort should be made to identify areas for urban development and encourage development of these areas," he said.

"Second, social housing for the lower-income groups must be stepped up significantly.

"Here, available federal funds have gone unused in the past and the performance of the three co-operating levels of government has been dismal."

Block said the federal 11-per-cent sales tax "has added significantly to costs and inflationary pressure in housing."

"The government's persistence in disallowing the deduction of interest costs from income tax has added a large tax burden on every home-owner.

"And the devastating tight money policies have brought mortgage interest rates to an unbearable level."

Block said low rental returns and an increasing trend by society to regard landlords as parasitic made rental housing an unattractive investment with the result rental production had been curtailed. Another factor was the federal government's tax legislation.

Turning to the rental field, Block said "rental housing has become an unattractive investment and therefore, production has been severely curtailed."

He said the underlying reasons were that "financial returns are very low. This fact has even been recognized by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp."

"The identical rental unit when designated as a condominium will receive a loan amount almost twice as high as it would have if it remained a rental unit.

"A recent change disallows the transfer of losses from real estate rental units to other income.

"The net result of this legislation has been to reduce the investor interest in rental units."

CRESTBROOK FOREST INDUSTRIES LTD. ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. Victor C. Brown, President of Crestbrook Forest Industries Ltd., is pleased to announce the election of the Hon. J. R. Nicholson, P.C., O.B.E., Q.C., F.R.A.I. (Can,), as a Director of the Company.

He is presently a Director of Inexco Northern Exploration Company.

He is the honorary Colonel of the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's), and an Honorary Fellow of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada. Soybean Futures Soar In Spectacular Trading

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Board of Trade hoped Thursday soybean trading would return to something near normal after a stretch of 25 trading days which saw soybeans increase by the permissible limit 21 times. The board has increased the percentage of the transaction a dealer must pay upon making the contract and announced it would drop the limit.

Prices in futures of grains, wheat, corn and oats have also risen during the same period. Most dramatic was the rise in July soybeans — soybeans which the dealer has contracted to deliver in July — which climbed roughly $4 a bushel between April 25 and the close Wednesday.

Soybeans are widely used for feeding livestock and in making cooking oils, so housewives could feel the effects of a price increase at the grocery.

Trading in futures involves transactions in which a dealer buys or sells for delivery at a future date.

Part of the reason for the demand for wheat, corn, oats and soybeans lies in the belief of some traders that China, the Soviet Union and India will need U.S. agricultural output and that the demand for U.S. commodities will exceed the supply, even should there be a record yield in next fall's harvest.

Gold Keeps Climbing

LONDON (UPI) — Gold reached another all-time peak price of $114.75 an ounce on London's free market Thursday.

The metal closed at the record level, up 75 cents per ounce from its close Wednesday.

The price of gold also hit a new summit on Hong Kong's bullion market Thursday, reaching $106.10 per ounce before closing at $105.50. The close was $4.10 above the previous day's closing price.

"Today's record price for gold . . . was brought back to the market by continued uncertainty on the dollar situation," one gold dealer said.

"The latest fever has been sparked by renewed talk of an increase in the official gold price from its present dwarfish level of $42 an ounce," said another bullion dealer, Johnson Matthey.

Dissidents Lose In Afton Action

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dissident Afton Mines Ltd. shareholders could not delay a proposed $4 million settlement of court actions blocking development of the Afton orebody near Kamloops at a meeting here Thursday.

The settlement was approved by ballot with 1,772,329 shares in favor and 429,381 against. A group of 84,030 proxy votes was not counted.

A motion to allow Afton to acquire shares in other companies was passed by a show of hands, as was an amendment from the dissident group barring Afton from acquiring shares in the Teck-ISO companies group.

The settlement pays Canex-Placer $4 million to buy out the development agreement between Canex-Placer and Afton and allows Teck to take over the same agreement for development of the property.

Internal 'Explosions' Weaken Wall Street

Will Canada Take Heed?

By BRUCE WHITESTONE
From Montreal

More than 50 years ago a young fanatic threw a bomb outside the offices of J. P. Morgan and Company on Wall Street in New York. Fortunately the ensuing damage was relatively minor. Now, Wall Street is again a disaster area but the explosions this time are internal: bombs have been replaced by "shotgun" mergers and liquidations. However, the bloodbath that has taken place is nothing compared to the bloodbath that may come.

Volume so far this year on the major exchange is inadequate to sustain most Wall Street firms. The small investor, whose support is vital, is getting out of the market and nothing is being done to check the exodus.

How serious is the position of Wall Street? The New York Stock Exchange has stated that more than half of its member firms are losing money.

What makes this so ominous is that stock averages to date are not all that much lower than the level prevailing last year. If, as it appears likely, stock prices fall sharply, more and more investors will be tempted to give up on the stock market and place their remaining funds elsewhere. Also, the early months of the year are usually a time of fairly active trading in advance of the summer. Then trading is traditionally languid which means that a further decline in activity appears very likely.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange is only about 15 per cent less than last year's total, but the fee structure has been altered and this has caused a great deal of damage. The large financial institutions have been granted rate cuts while the small investor has found that the commissions on small transactions have been raised. This has driven individuals out of the market even though the market is dependent on their participation. After all, individuals are the ultimate source of all funds.

While Canadian firms express the hope that the troubles besetting Wall Street will not be repeated here, they are living in a fool's paradise. The Canadian economy is a mirror image of the United States counterpart and the inter-relationship of the two is so obvious that it does not need to be belabored.

Further, when the United States lifts the Interest Equalization Tax on the purchases by its nationals of foreign securities (scheduled to take place in 1974) Wall Street firms will be in a position to trade in Canadian securities. The huge resources of these U.S. firms will enable them to dominate the Canadian market by taking positions in the leading Canadian issues.

Finally, Canadian firms seem to be repeating the mistakes made by the investment community south of the border — discouraging the participation of small investors and permitting overhead costs to rise sharply.

Other unfortunate parallels exist between the U.S. and Canadian financial communities. Our fee schedule is being revised and, unbelievably, it is copying the same general trends that have led the Wall Street community to disaster. The small investor will have to pay higher rates while pension funds and the like will benefit from lower rates.

Further, in Canada, brokerage firms' costs are rising and there is a trend to luring the larger investors with "all expense" junkets to the Arctic, Australia and Brazil while the small investor must be satisfied with belatedly learning about the situation with "after the fact" reports.

It is not surprising that already one Montreal exchange member firm has been forced to close its doors and that rumours are already being heard of other firms in trouble.

One of the troubles besetting many investment firms is their management. All too often the successful salesman becomes the chief executive of the organization and with predictable results: sales are emphasized regardless of the costs entailed. As a result profit margins have been under severe pressure.

The developing panic among investors must persuade many firms to change their tactics. It will probably be too late, however, to prevent real damage to many investors and to the financial community in general.

Rationalization and greater efficiency are long overdue in the investment industry; in fact, they are the essential ingredients in any sustainable rise in the economy. Without the ability to raise funds on the stock market, our capitalist economy cannot continue to function.

It is to be hoped that our governments, both federal and provincial, will recognize that they must aid the financial industry by legislation curbing its abuses.

BUSINESS TOPICS

He Makes Some Points

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

One year ago Monday a cast-iron fitting on the Liberian-registered oil tanker World Bond broke while it was discharging crude oil, brought from the Persian Gulf, into Atlantic Richfield refinery tanks at Cherry Point, Wash.

Depending on your source of information, there were either:

- 15 tons of oil spilled;
- 100 to 300 barrels;
- 4,000 to 12,000 gallons;
- or zillions of teaspoonfuls.

Only the most zealous of environmentalists would opt for the last figure. Tanker operators and refinery managers like the first one and the others can be altered at will depending on whether or not one employs the U.S. or Imperial gallon as a conversion factor.

In any event, the accident should never have happened and it must be said that not much has occurred since to guarantee that such a mishap or a similar one will be repeated.

Author William Michael Ross uses the rough 4,000-12,000 gallon figures in a new book just out in the past week — Oil Pollution as an International Problem. Such loose usage of what should be by now an available figure, along with strong evidence of bias, are real flaws in what could have been a useful contribution to the energy debate.

Ross' thesis has been published by the geography department of the University of Victoria as Volume 6 in its Western Geographical Series. It sells for $4 in leading bookstores here and in Vancouver and has been co-published in a hard cover by the University of Washington Press in Seattle.

The author disarmingly allows that he is prejudiced on the subject, having been raised in Vancouver. After taking degrees in education and arts at UBC and the University of Toronto, he obtained his Ph. D. at the University of Washington and now is an assistant professor at Kent State University in Ohio.

Most of the thesis was compiled prior to the Cherry Point incident but nevertheless events describing what happened at that time are tucked in at the end of the book to provide emphasis to the points made earlier.

Ross does make points — some good ones, too. On top of that, he even provides some perhaps worthwhile suggestions as to how a regional concept could be employed to stave off incidents such as Cherry Point.

Descriptions of existing international, federal and provincial legislations are fully given and the tabulation of these alone make the book a worthwhile effort.

The study also probes knowingly into what is available by way of response to marine pollution accidents from all levls of government. The author repeats the observation made by others that too often all that is available in the whole field is possible compensation after the fact.

But it is the suggestions for a solution that intrigue:

"... regional arrangements, while somewhat utopian in concept, offer the most realistic, comprehensive solution to the problem in the study area."

Ross sees a bilateral and multilateral regional agreement as a far sounder method of looking after our particular region than international agreements.

Financing for such a group would be mainly provided by taxing tankers according to their load and capability of withstanding marine accidents — double hulls, compartments, navigation aids, etc.

Power Crisis

Skylab Repair Possible Mission

HOUSTON (UPI) — Skylab's astronauts, frustrated by a power shortage that threatened to curtail Earth surveys, Thursday night agreed to shove a television camera outside to see if a damaged power generating wing can be freed during a space walk.

Commander Charles (Pete) Conrad told Mission Control the crew members would conduct the usual exterior survey today, even though it was their "day off."

The camera would be pushed through an airlock in the side of Skylab and aimed at the stuck wing so engineers at Mission Control could see what it would take to free it. If the big panel can be unfolded, its solar cells would convert sunlight into enough electricity to end Skylab's energy crisis.

In the meantime, Conrad, Dr. Joseph Kerwin and Paul Weitz turned off some ventilating fans, lights, a bathroom water heater and cancelled a survey of Earth's resources to conserve electricity Thursday.

"A procedure has been worked up, for looking via TV out the airlock at the SAS (Solar Array System) wing and the value of this is currently being determined here," William Thornton in Mission Control told the pilots.

"How would you feel like doing about three hours of this on your day off tomorrow?"

"Yeah, I guess we'll have to," said Conrad. "Let's do it."

In Huntsville, Ala., backup commander Russell Schweickart rushed ground tests to work out spacewalk procedures if the television survey shows that a spacewalk could be safely carried out to cut an aluminum strap locking the wing against Skylab.

Schweickart worked submerged in a deep water tank in Huntsville, floating as a spacewalker would in weightless space. Clad in a pressure suit, he moved along the side of a Skylab model, searching for any finger or toe holds Conrad could use to crawl down the side of the orbiting space station to work on the panel.

Trudeau Plugs Leaks

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau Thursday declined direct comment on an alleged leaked cabinet document which was said to disclose a reshuffling of the government's priorities. But he replied no when asked whether several reported priority changes were true.

Newspaper reports earlier Thursday said that a confidential cabinet document shows the cabinet has assigned top priority to stimulating economic growth in the poorer regions of Canada and that environmental protection and economic nationalism have been relegated to the bottom of the nine-point list.

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield asked in the Commons whether it was true that priorities had changed and the fight against inflation had been reduced to priority No. 6.

The prime minister said no. Later when George Hees (PC—Prince Edward Hastings) asked why environmental protection had been relegated to last position, Trudeau replied that "the government has not done that."

He said the priorities change from time to time and it also depends on whether an item is a priority for consideration or for action. When it appears that a problem is on the way to being solved, another might replace it in the list of priorities.

As he said when there was an earlier spate of government leaks there is "a standing instruction from me" to ensure that an investigation is carried out to determine the source of the leak . . . Confidentiality remains the basis on which the government should be able to operate."

Eldon Wolliams (PC—Calgary North) asked whether public servants are being fingerprinted to help track down leaks. To the best of his memory, replied the prime minister, all public servants are not fingerprinted.

Dollar Signs Dance Through the World of Art

By DON BREMNER
Colonist-Los Angeles Times

The first caveman who drew a bear's picture on the wall of his cave probably gave no thought to how many clams his creation was worth. It was true art for art's sake.

Progress has changed all that. Now artists and collectors see more than beauty, meaning or emotion in art. They also see dollar signs dancing through the hues and across the sculptured surfaces.

The death of Pablo Picasso and the future of his huge collection adds yet another intriguing element to an art scene where great works are prized like blue-chip stocks, and where masterpieces are almost an international currency.

With prices at historic highs, art is a business enlivened by fakes and forgeries, by downgrading of previously recognized works, by controversial sales of paintings and an even more controversial purchase of a Greek vase by a leading museum.

Beyond these are some worrisome trends in the art world:

- The sigh of the muse is almost drowned out by the rustle of cash, although purists still urge that art be bought for esthetic joy, not just potential profit.

- Prices driven up by speculators and what one museum official called "the fashionable crowd" make it difficult for American museums to acquire more art works for public display.

- Devaluation of the U.S. dollar has speeded the flow of art works from American collections to German, Japanese and other foreign buyers.

- The lucrative rush to get native art objects from foreign lands for display in the United States and Europe —"looting" and "smuggling," some critics call it—endangers archaeological sites in Asia and Latin America.

The value of "art" as a hedge against inflation accounts for much of the demand, and the rise in prices. Like diamonds, gold jewelry or real estate, good works of art keep their worth and rise in price while inflation robs money of its old value.

"It's not surprising that people want to invest in art," said Peter McCoy, president of the Los Angeles branch of Sotheby Parke Bernet, the world's leading art auction firm, with operations in New York, London and other cities.

"It's certainly more appealing to hang a painting on your wall than a framed stock certificate. And they're not going to lose money on it."

The state of the art market normally depends on the supply of works available for sale, how much loose money people have, and tastes or fashion. Changing tastes can easily send prices of some types of art zooming or skidding.

How much a particular painting or sculpture will bring may depend on something as unpredictable as a personal whim, or the fever of an auction which pits two equally determined bidders against each other.

Japanese buyers recently have played a leading role in art purchases, using some of the millions of dollars earned selling motorcycles and transistors to buy up paintings, sculptures and ceramics, along with lumber, race horses and other commodities.

Japanese accounted for $200,000 out of total sales of $500,000 at a recent Southeby Parke Bernet auction, McCoy said. Across the United States, Japanese purchases totalling millions of dollars virtually set the price for much of the Western art changing hands.

All of this action is exciting is you're an artist, or an art dealer. But it's discouraging to museum curators who have to stretch their limited budgets over today's high prices like a housewife at the meat counter.

"It makes it extremely difficult," said Laurence Sickman, director of the Nelson Gallery and Atkins Museum in Kansas City.

"Museums are faced with a double threat. Many of us work on foundation or endowment income which does not keep up with inflation, and our operating costs have increased enormously.

"This is compounded by this enormous increase in art prices, much of which I don't understand. Our trouble is that the art market, instead of being for art lovers and museums, is for speculation and investment."

Museums sometimes weed out their collections and sell some works to get money to buy others.

New York's Museum of Modern Art, for instance (founded in 1929 with a collection of 19th century art), has followed the donor's wish and sold part of it to buy 20th century art. Among other things, the museum now has what a spokesman called "the most important" collection of Picassos of any museum.

But New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art drew a spate of press criticism last year for the close-to-the-vest way it went about disposing of dozens of works, some well-known.

The Metropolitan hit the headlines again this year after it had boasted of a coup—the acquisition of a handsome 2,500-year-old Greek wine mixing bowl signed by the master painter Euphronios—for a reported $1 million.

The Italian government said the painted vase had been looted from a tomb and charged it was smuggled out of Italy.

Archaeologists and others have warned that news of the $1 million paid for the vase, as well as other high prices for similar objects, would encourage the traffic in art items looted from ancient sites throughout the world.

Not only small objects such as vases, bowls and statues, but even entire slabs of monuments bearing fragile hieroglyphics have been removed from ruins of Maya and other pre-Columbian civilizations in Central America and transported to American museums. Similar depredations occur in Cambodia and in Eastern Mediterranean countries.

Crimp Put in Secret Office

By STEPHEN SCOTT

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative majority on the Commons justice committee voted down a portion of the solicitor-general's estimates Thursday because it contained money for the controversial police and security analysis group.

The committee approved all of the departmental estimates for the 1973-74 fiscal year with the exception of $2,978,000 for program expenditures.

By a vote of eight to six, with the lone New Democrat, Stuart Leggatt (New Westminster) supporting the Liberals, the committee rejected that estimate because it contained $278,000 for the analysis group, which has been the object of questioning by Eric Nielsen (PC—Yukon) and others.

The committee report now goes to the Commons where the government will have to submit a motion for approval of the rejected estimate.

While it is certain to pass, with the NDP supporting the minority government, it will open up the matter of the security and analysis group for debate.

Nielsen has asked many questions on the Commons order paper about security in government in general and about the security and analysis group in particular.

The committee had two in-camera meetings dealing with security, and during one of them visited the group.

Nielsen said Thursday he is not satisfied with information so far received. He said he could not be more specific because the committee had undertaken not to discuss matters heard in camera.

But he said he is not satisfied that there are enough safeguards that the analysis group, an arm of government, cannot be subverted for political purposes at some future time.

He said the Conservatives would require further closed committee meetings on the matter to get more information before they could approve the operating expenditures estimates.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand has said he is willing to have more such meetings.

The minister dismissed the Conservative vote as a "political manoeuvre."

He said he had all his security officials on hand at the meeting in case questions were asked. They included Robin Bourne, head of the analysis group, and assistant commissioner H. C. Draper, deputy director of the RCMP security section.

Hush Unit Doomed In U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The justice department has begun to dismantle the Intelligence Evaluation Committee, a secret domestic unit established in 1970.

A department spokesman said Thursday letters will be sent to the other agencies involved in the committee — the White House, FBI, CIA, National Security Agency, the Secret Service, and the departments of treasury and defence.

The spokesman said the order to disband the committee came from Henry Peterson, aassistant attorney-general in charge of the criminal division.

NHL Fidgets as Howe Considers Aero Offer

CP-UPI

DETROIT — National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell said Thursday it would be "a tragedy" if Gordie Howe switched leagues but he said the NHL probably could not do anything about it.

"I think myself it's one of those situations where we're locked in," Campbell said. "I can't conceive of any action we can take at this time that we can stand up to and be free of serious legal consequences."

The former Detroit Red Wing great's sons, Marty, 19, and Mark, 18, have been drafted by Houston Aeros of the rival World Hockey Association and the three Howes are going to Houston Monday to talk about the possibility of them all playing next season.

NHL rules do not permit amateurs under 20 to be drafted or signed by member teams, although that matter was placed by Campbell "on the agenda" for the board of governors' annual meeting June 11-13 in Montreal.

"I don't think there's any way in which that (changing the rules) can be done in time," Campbell said in a telephone interview from his office. "That's assuming our attorneys would permit us to do it at all."

Campbell said if there is "any possibility" of bending the rules, "we would have done so. But if we bend the rules in these circumstances against a WHA team, what do you think the consequences are going to be in our litigation with the WHA?"

"I have always said I would like to play at least one year with my boys," Howe, 45, said early this week.

"The Aeros talked to me briefly, and I'm open minded right now.

"They seem quite interested in the whole family."

"We've had some preliminary conversations and while they were talking about the boys they asked me how I'd like to get back on the ice," said the highest scorer in National Hockey League history.

"We'll be talking about the boys' contracts," he added. "And about the possibility of one for me!"

"I don't know. There are so many ifs . . . but, I'm definitely interested."

The elder Howe was drafted by Los Angeles Sharks in the original WHA draft a year ago.

Howe retired from the Red Wings at the end of the 1970-71 season after 25 years with the club. During those years he made the NHL record book look like a personal testimonial.

Among the league records he holds are those for most seasons played, 25; goals scored, 786; assists, 1,023, an total points, 1,908.

The first time Howe played with his sons was in an exhibition game two years ago in Detroit to raise money to combat muscular dystrophy.

Even though the Aeros are interested in all three Howes Gordie says there will be "no family plan" or "reduced group rates."

Three Canadiens Voted To NHL All-Star Team

MONTREAL — Three members of the Montreal Canadiens, Stanley Cup champions, have been named to the National Hockey League's all-star team.

Goalkeeper Ken Dryden, defenceman Guy Lapointe and left winger Frank Mahovlich were selected from the Canadiens, who lost only 10 games in the regular schedule to easily capture the Prince of Wales Trophy for the East Division title.

Joining the three Montrealers are defenceman Bobby Orr and centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins and right winger Mickey Redmond of Detroit Red Wings.

Dryden, who won the Calder Trophy for rookies in 1971-72 and captured the Vezina Trophy for leading Canadiens to a 2.36 goals-against average during the season, topped the poll. He received 238 of a possible 240 points to gain his first berth on the all-star team.

Closest to him in the voting was Orr, who had 29 goals and 72 assists for 101 points despite missing 15 games early in the season because of a slow-healing knee which was operated on over the summer. Orr had 236 points to mark his sixth consecutive selection. His only miss was his rookie season, 1966-67, when he was one of the runners-up.

Esposito, who won his third straight scoring title and fourth in five seasons with 55 goals and 75 assists for 130 points, received 226 points. He easily beat out Philadelphia Flyers' Bobby Clarke, winner of the Hart Trophy for the league's most valuable player. It was the fifth consecutive time Esposito had been named to the team.

For Mahovlich, who has been a runner-up six times, it was his third selection to the team. Bobby Hull, who played 15 seasons for Chicago Black Hawks before joining Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association as a player-coach, dominated the left wing spot in the voting for years.

Defenceman Brad Park of New York Rangers, right winger Yvan Cournoyer of Canadiens and Clarke were the other runners-up.

Cournoyer won the Conn Smythe Trophy as the outstanding performer in the Stanley Cup playoffs but was behind Redmond in the regular schedule scoring race.

Redmond, one of three players to score 50 goals or more during the season, had 52 goals and 41 assists for 94 points, tying him with Johnny Bucyk of the Bruins and Mahovlich in seventh place. Cournoyer had 40 goals and 39 assists in 67 games.

Dryden tops the list of post-season money winners with $23,000. He collected his $15,000 share for the Stanley Cup victory, a $4,000 share for the East Division championship and $2,000 for the Vezina Trophy as well as the all-star bonus.

Voting was done by the Professional Hockey Writers of America from the 15 NHL cities (New York has two teams in the league).

Weird First Inning

Jenkins Gains Sixth Win

Chicago Cubs scored 10 unearned runs in the first inning as they helped Ferguson Jenkins win his sixth game by downing the Houston Astros, 16-8, in a bizarre National League game.

"I never had such a big early lead in my baseball career," said Jenkins.

In the first inning Houston starter Dave Roberts appeared to have things under control when he retired Rick Monday and Glenn Beckert on ground balls.

After Billy Williams singled, Astro third baseman Dave Rader bobbled Ron Santo's grounder to open the gates. The Cubs went on to load the bases five times against Roberts and relievers Jim Ray and Cecil Upshaw.

Included in the weird first inning were four bases on balls, a hit batter, a wild pitch, and two-run singles by Jose Cardenal and Carmen Fanzone.

Jenkins has been giving up a lot of home runs, (17), but is off to a better start than last year. At this time last season he had five wins and five losses. This year he has six wins and three losses and is well on his way to a seventh consecutive 20-victory season.

Two of the home runs he has given up were back-to-back shots Thursday by Jesus Alou and Tommy Agee.

Jenkins figures the warm weather ahead will bring out his best.

"I'm on the beam usually in June, July and August. It just seems I can do more with my body in the warm weather."

St. Louis Cardinals had their win streak stopped at eight games, losing, 3-2, to Cincinnati.

For heavyweight chinooks on light tackle Bates Beach, just north of Courtenay, has been the hot spot this week.

Sport anglers have been taking fish up to 25 pounds, with many of them in the 15 and 16-pound bracket, between 7 and 10 p.m., on plug and six ounces of weight to start and fishing lighter as dusk arrives. Some have been fishing the evening fishing with just a plug and no weight.

It has been easy fishing, less than a quarter mile from shore, just on the outskirts of the kelp beds, and concentrated along less than two miles of shoreline between Kitty Coleman Beach and Seal Bay.

Up until Tuesday, Bates Beach Resort had been averaging 12 big chinooks a night. On Tuesday there were 24 weighed in.

Rex Field and Tomick plugs have been best producers, but Buzz Bombers have been taking some and some anglers have been using hootchies.

The Gulf of Georgia from Campbell River to Nanaimo was just a sea of white caps Thursday morning and impossible to fish

But previous to that, bluebacking in the Campbell River to Comox area had fallen off and reports indicate the blues had moved into mid-Gulf waters.

But chinooks have been filling the gap. At Campbell River there have been a couple of chinooks in the tyee class taken in Duncan Bay waters where moochers with needlefish and Deadly Dicks and Buzz Bombs have been taking them as well as trollers using Herring Teasers.

* * *

Deep Bay-Bowser is still looking for those coho which usually show at this time, but anglers are getting fine chinook fishing off Chrome Island, fishing from on the surface to very deep with Herring Teasers or Tom Mack spoons. The chinooks have been mainly in the seven to 15-pound bracket, with one or two reported in the 20s.

Northwest Bay-Mistaken Island-Grey Rocks areas was fairly good for small chinooks in the Northwest Bay area and coho to four pounds in the Mistaken Island-Grey Rocks waters at the weekend, but northwest winds blew all anglers off the water mid-week. Green and white flies, trolled with 12 to 16 ounces of weight had been taking the blues.

Porlier Pass and Active Pass waters have been giving up some chinooks and blues and the number of grilse is increasing in Satellite Channel. Cowichan Bay has been producing a few chinooks feeding on an abundance of herring and/Sansum Narrows has been giving up the odd chinook in the 17 and 18-pound bracket.

Biggest catch recently has been a 26½-pounder by John Rose, on Strip Teaser from the Stone House area Sunday.

Mostly the Inlet catches have been bluebacks to four pounds and jacksprings in the three and four-pound class. Strip has been taking the bigger fish and Krippled K and Tom Mack spoons fished close to the surface have been picking up blues.

Oak Bay has been slow and Pedder Bay to Otter Point waters are rated good for chinooks, although it takes a little know-how to catch them. Victoria waterfront has been giving up some chinooks.

Bentinck Island has been producing some chinooks, biggest so far a 29-pounder. Becher Bay - Secretary Island waters are still giving up numbers of chinooks, some in the 30s, and anglers are in those waters looking for one to top Dave Wigmore's 46½-pounder.

Tide changes and very deep with strip or herring has been the best combination.

This is the peak period for freshwater fishing in lakes, so any lake is worth trying.

Victoria City Police Athletic Association is promoting its first open derby in Saanich Inlet June 16, from daylight to 3 p.m. Weigh-in will be at Brentwood Boat Rentals and Hall's Boathouse and rules call for sports tackle, one rod to an angler.

There will be many hidden weight prizes, including a color TV set.

Tickets at $5 each may be obtained at the police station and include an after-derby party and chicken dinner at the Brentwood Hall, starting at 4 p.m.

Bullen gave up only two hits — singles by Dave Galloway — and allowed three men on base in a 5-0 triumph over CFB Esquimalt by Seaboard Construction, leaders in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Six Mile House downed sagging Mike's Sport Shop, 7-3, in a game at Heywood Avenue Park.

Bullen stuck out eight batters and was in difficulty only in the second inning when Jay Lapeyre drew a one-out base on balls and Galloway followed with his first single.

However, Bullen worked out of the jam by striking out the next two batters.

Galloway opened the fifth inning with a single and stole second base but remained there when Bullen retired the next three batters in order.

Bob Reid provided Bullen with all the help he needed, smashing a two-run homer in the second inning to give Bullen a three-run cushion.

Six Mile House benefitted from sloppy defence for their win over Mike's, who committed six errors.

Weiskopf Matches Record For Lead in Kemper Open

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf matched the course record with a seven-under-par 65 and took the first-round lead in the $200,000 Kemper Open golf tournament Thursday.

The group at 67 included Ken Still, Mac McLendon, Leonard Thompson, rookie Pat Fitzsimons and Bert Greene.

Arnold Palmer and Australian Bruce Crampton headed another large bunch at 68 on the 7219-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course.

In all, more than 50 broke par 72 and more than half the field matched or bettered par figures.

Sam Snead was at 69, Lee Trevino had a 70 and defending champion Doug Sanders was at 71.

Jack Nicklaus, who beat Weiskopf by two strokes at Atlanta last week, is not competing.

Weiskopf, winner of the Colonial National Invitation four weeks ago, didn't get in a practice round on the Quail Hollow layout and delayed until Wednesday his decision to play here.

He missed only one green, the 18th. He drove in the right rough there, missed the green to the left, but chipped up to 30 inches and made the par putt.

It was the only time he was in any trouble.

He made a deuce on the second hole, hitting a seven-iron to eight feet, and lashed a six-iron shot to within two feet of the flag on the fourth hole.

Weiskopf reached the par-five fifth with a three-wood second shot for another birdie, went four-under with a six-foot putt on the seventh and surged in front alone with three consecutive birdies starting on the 13th hole.

CFL Turns Down Ballard Application

OTTAWA (CP) — A bid by Maple Leaf Gardens Ltd. to operate a second Canadian Football League franchise in Toronto was turned down Thursday by members of the league's executive committee.

CFL Commissioner Jake Gaudaur said the executive — made up of owners and officials of the nine league teams — had concluded it could not consider the application by Bill Ballard, vice-president of the Gardens, at this time because of a procedural error.

"It would be necessary for the applicant to first get clearance from the team that holds the exclusive CFL franchise rights in that city," Gaudaur said, adding that Maple Leaf Gardens had not done so.

The commissioner said Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference had been granted these rights.

The decision appeared academic. It would have taken unanimous consent by all four EFC clubs, plus a three-fifths favorable vote by Western Football Conference teams, to allow the new entry.

Without first approaching the Argonauts for permission to bid, the application by Ballard never reached the voting stage.

Lew Hayman, president of the Argos, said he had never been asked by the Ballard group concerning the latter's application. Hayman said he was "almost positive" that John Bassett, board chairman of the existing Toronto team, also had not been approached.

The application had been accompanied by a cheque for $25,000.

Gaudaur said that while the league does have the right to retain this deposit, that "up to this point" all previous deposits accompanying franchise applications "had been turned back" to the unsuccessful bidders.

Gaudaur said that if the Ballard group did gain approval by the Argonauts to further the bid and the application was approved by the executive, the earliest entry date likely would be 1975.

In other business, the executive postponed ratification of the 1974 schedule until June 27, the date of the league all-star game in Hamilton.

The 1974 schedule will see the EFC teams adopt the same type of 16-game schedule the WFC has operated on for years. Both conferences now have sudden-death semi-final and final playoff concepts before the national championship — the Grey Cup game.

In 1974 both conferences will go to a 15-week season with the earliest CFL opening in history scheduled for Wednesday, July 24, and the final regular-season contest to take place Nov. 3 — a Sunday.

The move to an earlier finish of the 1974 season allows the Grey Cup game to be played Sunday, Nov. 24 in Vancouver, one week earlier than previously announced, Gaudaur said. This year's Grey Cup contest is scheduled, also on a Sunday, for Toronto, Nov. 25.

While the postponement in ratification of the 1974 schedule was ostensibly to allow the general managers more time to study the new concept, it was learned that it will also give Montreal Alouettes time to overcome a scheduling barrier unique to the EFC club.

The Alouettes meet head-on with Montreal Expos of baseball's National League four times this year in search for box office dollars.

Sam Berger, Montreal owner, made a presentation to the executive asking for a delay in ratification so that further study can be carried out to ensure the same thing does not happen in 1974.

Gaudaur said the delay will allow him to contact baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn and conduct negotiations at a commissioner level.

J. I. Albrecht, general manager of the Alouettes, said the delay gives him time to talk with his baseball counterpart in Montreal — Jim Fanning of the Expos.

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football league have signed defensive-back Barry Ardern to a multi-year contract completing half the trade which sent Jim Evenson to Ottawa Rough Riders.

The Lions obtained Ardern, five feet, 10 inches, 180 pounds, and reserve Canadian lineman Gus Revenberg for Evenson. Revenberg is expected to be under contract soon.

Also signed were Canadians Harold Grozdanich, an offensive tackle from Boise State, six feet, four inches and 250 pounds, and running backs Bob Helman, North Dakota, six-foot-one and 200 pounds, and Corradino Doret of Toronto, six feet, 190 pounds.

Thompson, Bigelow Experience Woes

LADNER (CP) — Fraser McRae of Vancouver Quilchena fired a one-over-par 73 Thursday to take a one-stroke lead after the second round of the B.C. Golf Association's fourth annual senior amateur championship at Beach Grove Golf Club.

McRae, who shot 76 Wednesday, had scores of 35-38 Thursday for a 149 total. Third and final round will be played today.

Vern Goodfellow of Vancouver McCleery is alone in second place with a 150 total. He shot a 74 Thursday.

Defending champion Ernie Brown of McCleery moved from fifth to third place by shooting 75 for a 151 total. He shares third with Henry Mitchell of Vancouver Langara.

Bill Thompson of Victoria, Wednesday's leader, slipped to six strokes off the pace with a 155 total. Thompson, the only player to shoot par in the tourney so far, had an 83 on Thursday after his 72 on Wednesday.

Dr. George Bigelow of Victoria Golf Club, who was in second place following the first round, is 11 strokes back after shooting a second round 85.

Indy Winner Plagued By Financial Woes

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Gordon Johncock, a journeyman driver from the northwoods of Michigan, was officially declared the winner of the richest auto race in history Thursday and began looking ahead at some acute financial woes.

The 36-year-old Johncock, twice married and divorced, will pick up a cheque for more than $215,000 for his triumph in Wednesday's tragic, rain-shortened 57th running of the Indianapolis 500-mile race.

About three months ago, the 150-pound, five-foot-seven veteran of 18 years in racing cockpits had filed a bankruptcy petition in the federal district court for southern Indiana. He now lists his home address as Franklin, Ind., south of Indianapolis.

He listed liabilities of $369,551.13 and assets of $66,500, most of which represented a 147-acre tract of land in his native Michigan and an oil lease in Kentucky.

His position has yet to be heard in court, and no action to declare him officially bankrupt can be taken until the case is heard.

Johncock, who returned to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Thursday to take possession of the white Cadillac convertible that went to the winner, refused to talk about his finances.

Actually, he appeared to be more concerned with the condition of teammate Swede Savage, a 26-year-old California driver who was critically hurt in a flaming crash during the 58th lap of the race.

Savage, victim of a near-fatal wreck two years ago, was in hospital with a badly burned right hand, two broken legs, some internal injuries and burns around the face and eyes.

His condition was listed as critical but stable Thursday and he was reported to be writing messages to hospital attendants and relatives with his left hand.

Johncock also mourned the death of 22-year-old Armondo Teran, a crew member attached to the three-car Andy Granatelli team for which the winner drove.

Teran died about an hour after he was struck by a fire-fighting vehicle going the wrong way up pit road in a mad dash to reach the Savage crash scene.

Johncock, whose best finish in eight previous starts at the Speedway was fourth in 1966, ran only 332.5 miles Wednesday before the race was red-flagged because of rain.

Johncock was credited with leading 64 of Wednesday's 133 completed laps, including the final 61. He thus will receive $6,400 in lap prize money.

In addition, he will receive the income from numerous endorsements, personal appearances, and at least $500 from each track on the remainder of the U.S. Auto Club championship circuit.

He said he plans to run them all, and try for the USAC driving title, which carries another $50,000 bonus.

In the official rundown, Billy Vukovich was assured of second place, Roger McCluskey was given third place, Mel Kenyon fourth and Gary Bettenhausen fifth.

Frazier Starting Comeback Trail

It will be Frazier's first fight since he lost his world heavyweight title to George Foreman in Jamaica last January. Foreman won by a knockout in the second round.

Granatelli Presses For Racing Reform

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andy Granatelli, whose car Gordon Johncock drove to victory in the Indianapolis 500 Wednesday, said Thursday he will withdraw from United States Automobile Club racing in 1974 unless there are reforms.

Granatelli, head of the STP Corporation, said changes should be made to reduce speeds of racing cars and the hazards of fuel fires.

Involved in racing since 1946 at Indianapolis, he also won at the motor speedway in 1969. Now, he said, he will pull out if there are not more safety factors for next year.

"What should have been the moment of the greatest possible joy for me yesterday was shattered by the loss of our crewman, Armando Teran, and the critical injury to one of our drivers, Swede Savage," Granatelli said.

"I have repeatedly tried to interest auto club and track officials in a planned program for reducing speeds by restricting fuel consumption and fuel loads. My pleas have largely gone unheeded," he said.

Gray Stops Ring Rival

HALIFAX (CP) — Clyde Gray of Toronto, Canadian and Commonwealth welterweight boxing champion, used a stiff left jab and left-right combinations to score a six-round technical knockout over unranked Tony Berrios of Scranton, Pa., Thursday night.

Ring physician Dr. K. R. Nickerson stopped the one-sided contest between the sixth and seventh rounds, with Berrios bleeding badly from a cut left eyelid.

Olympic Village Location Red Hot Montreal Issue

MONTREAL (CP) — The location of the 1976 Olympic village is a hot issue because of concern over housing and green spaces in Montreal.

The question has repeatedly hit the floor of the Québec national assembly and has caused a rare split in Montreal city council where all 53 seats belong to Mayor Jean Drapeau's Civic party.

It has recently received more media attention — and this would have been hardly conceivable five months ago — than impending federal legislation for financing of the Olympics.

Critics charge that neither Mayor Drapeau nor any other authority has ever explained publicly just where the village will be located or how big it will be.

Mayor Drapeau had been scheduled to give the word by the end of May but a city hall spokesman said this week — after the issue had received still another workout in the assembly — that an announcement could only be expected "within a week or two."

The spokesman indicated various sites are being considered but another report mentioned only two. They were the eastern portion of CP Rail land occupied by the railway's Angus Shops, and the Viau Golf Course, also known as the Municipal Golf Course, diagonally northward across Sherbrooke Street from the site of the main Olympic Stadium.

Inner Harbor: Trim Phoenix Banishing Decay

Colonist Reporter

Planner Sees Beauty, Action, Utility

Sweeping proposals for the transformation of Victoria's Inner Harbor from a partially decayed facility which has outlived its original use to a place of excitement, activity and beauty were disclosed Thursday by Vancouver architect Arthur Erickson.

Before an audience of about 100 people, including aldermen and city hall personnel, Erickson unveiled the concept of his $35,000 study.

The city-owned Ocean Cement site on Wharf would be used for a medium-density commercial development. Erickson envisages a plexiglass structure containing specialty shops fronting on outdoor promenades and malls.

The structure would have its highest part at Wharf Street level. Terraces would lead down to the waterfront level. Plans also include a fisherman's market and a public marina on the Ocean Cement site.

The harbor's inner basin, at the foot of the Empress Hotel, would become a non-tidal body of water for small pleasure craft. Erickson proposes to separate this part of Inner Harbor from the rest by a pedestrian promenade to be built from the Ocean Cement property to Laurel Point, interrupted only by a small footbridge which could be raised to let small boats through.

The Marathon property on Belleville west of the CPR dock, Erickson says, should be used as a ferry terminal serving both the CPR and Black Ball. The latter would have to be relocated from its existing location.

The Maritime Museum, now in Bastion Square, is slated to be housed in the federally-owned Malahat Building on Wharf.

Erickson pointed out that his proposals are aimed at establishing for the Inner Harbor "a role of year-round water-oriented area for the leisure and recreation of the people of Victoria."

He said the study wasn't attempting to "create a new image for the harbor," but rather bring out the qualities that are already there.

"It has aimed to conserve and enchance those parts of the old harbor of great beauty, curiosity and historical interest — the old masonry walls, the remnants of the old city and the considerable splendor of the Parliament Buildings and the Empress Hotel with their accompanying gardens," Erickson said.

The survival of Old Town, he said, depends on creating a viable Inner Harbor which draws pedestrians to the area.

Erickson didn't put a price tag on his proposals, but in an interview following his presentation, he said the implementation of his proposals on publicly-owned land alone would cost about $12.5 million.

That, he said, would include the relocation of the Black Ball ferry terminal, the construction of the amphitheatre, the creation of the park and marina beside Johnson Street Bridge and the development of the Ocean Cement site.

Also included in that cost would be the separation of the non-tidal inner basin from the rest of the harbor and construction of the roof garden leading to the proposed ferry terminal.

Initial reaction to Erickson's proposals is cautious. Aldermen say they would first like to study them carefully, adding that they are "certainly impressed" by the study.

Cement Site Use Could Raise Row

Young

Vancouver architect Arthur Erickson's proposal to use the city-owned Ocean Cement site on Wharf for commercial development could easily become the most controversial part of the Inner Harbor study, made public Thursday.

Last week, Mayor Peter Pollen said the site wouldn't be used for any commercial development if he could help it.

Asked to comment on the mayor's statement, Ald. Mike Young, chairman of city council's zoning committee, said Thursday the mayor's remark's were "ill-advised."

Young said he didn't want to become "overly controversial" and had "no intention of taking issue" with the mayor, but remarks such as the ones made by Pollen tended to create more trouble than anything else.

"In other words, it's none of the mayor's damned business. He should discuss such matters with council," Young said.

Aside from whether or not the property, purchased two years ago by the city with financial help from Ottawa and the provincial government, should be used for commercial development, it's the nature of Erickson's proposal that may arouse controversy.

He proposes to build a partially enclosed, partially open structure containing numerous specialty shops all fronting on malls and promenades.

The materials to be used for the structure are plexiglass, a see-through material, brick and wood.

This, according to Erickson, will allow sunshine into the mall and all the boutiques and restaurants while, at the same time, giving people the feeling of being outdoors.

"If Victoria were the size of Los Angeles, the Ocean Cement site, perhaps the entire Inner Harbor would have to be a park to give people an opportunity to enjoy green space," he says.

He said if the city's Old Town is to survive, people must be given an incentive to come to the area. A commercial complex on the Ocean Cement site would be such an incentive.

He said the complex should include a pub, tea rooms, specialty food stores and restaurants, bookstores, craft and theatre workshops, day-care facilities and art displays.

"The general atmosphere should be that of a social-recreational-cultural-civic market place where a variety of human experiences are to happen," he says.

"The waterfront promenade on the dockside should be connected to the terraced interior and exterior spaces linking the various activity centres."

Evening of Frustration

Future School Plans Scanned

Greater Victoria school trustees spent what they felt was an evening of frustration Thursday, taking a preliminary "skipthrough" of proposals for school construction in the district during the next five years.

Led by architect John Neilson through a brief prepared by himself and school administrators, members of the board's facilities and school support committee had a first look at what is proposed to be done at every school — but with no money figures attached.

They saw present and projected enrolments, recommendations by the architect, requests from the principals, proposals based on these as to what should actually be done and finally, the priorities for each job — whether it should be done in one year, two, three or five.

To save time, Neilson drew particular attention only to the enrolment figures, the proposals and the priorities — but the recommendations and requests did not go unnoticed.

When they had gone through the list, board chairman Peter Bunn, said he had felt all evening like Alice Through the Looking Glass.

They had, he said, spent their time examining and signifying some approval of projects which they had no way of knowing would come about.

"We are bound by the Education department, so plans are being made based on the ironclad rules of the past. It's a crazy thing. Trustees should be holding down the lid while the commissioner of education decides which way education is going, and then decide what's to come down and what's to go up.

"We can't decide things tonight. In the next few years they could be totally meaningless.

"But we were told by the gentlemen in the stone teepee that this must be done."

Sig Dietze, director of facilities and school support, said he thought the reason for the 1-3-5 plan was to let trustees go ahead with a rough idea of requirements and costs as a guide for the department.

The 1-3-5 program includes a one-year top-priority list of needs, a three-year package to be submitted to referendum, and a five-year, long-range plan.

The submission before the trustees Thursday showed that only seven of the district's 57 schools showed a projected increase in enrolment, and these varied widely in types of residential area.

A few schools indicated enrollment holding steady, but the bulk showed a definite drop.

Part of this, according to Victor Thomson, director of instruction-curriculum, might be because it had been found that Grade 8 is the current peak year in school enrolment.

The submission also disclosed ultimate plans to phase out some existing schools to be replaced by new structures.

One such area, of course, is James Bay, where the present Beacon Hill and South Park schools will be replaced by a new building.

Other areas to be affected later are:

That bounded by the Trans-Canada Highway, Tillicum, Quadra and Hillside, with the ultimate phasing out of Burnside and Tolmie schools;

The Esquimalt-Victoria West-View Royal area, involving particularly Victoria West school and Craigflower.

The submission with its information and proposals, said committee chairman Walter Donald, will be forwarded to the B.C. education department.

Trustees, meanwhile, would confer further with the various principals with the hope of gaining a greater input of educational needs prior to the board meeting in July.

Dean Park Faucets Anger Householders

The water situation in North Saanich's Dean Park Estates subdivision is a case of now you see it now you don't, and the 35 householders are tired of it.

It's all a matter of water pressure which at various intervals throughout the day drops to zero and the only thing coming from open faucets is air.

"To take a shower when this happens is a real experience," Ken Wilson of 1969 Barrett Drive said Thursday.

Wilson said a pump to pressure the water uphill to the subdivision would be part of the solution.

Thursday night the residents decided they would each send letters explaining their problem to North Saanich Mayor Trevor Davis, each of the municipality's six aldermen, and also to Saanich MLA Hugh Curtis in a bid to get a continuous supply of water to their houses.

Sentencing On June 15

Saanich teenager Jo Ann Anderson, found guilty last week of manslaughter in the March 9 stabbing death of her mother Shirley, has been remanded to June 15 for sentencing. Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton of B.C. Supreme Court will hear pre-sentencing reports on the 17-year-old girl at that time.

Life Members

John Tribe and A. W. Forbes of Saanich and Dr. R. O'Brien of North Cowichan were made life members of the Municipal Officers Association of B.C. during the association's annual conference in Nelson Wednesday.

Park Ceremony In East Sooke

East Sooke Park, first acquired by the Capital Regional Board in the fall of 1970 was officially opened Thursday.

The park, which has grown from its original 1,704 acres to 2,173 acres grew even larger during the opening ceremonies.

Officiating at his first public function since becoming recreation minister Jack Radford announced that the provincial government is turning over to the region the 1,400 acres it owns within the park boundaries, to make a total park area of 3,573 acres.

The park is the largest of eight administered by the region, and is to be maintained in a semi-wilderness state.

Thursday's ceremonies were held at the Aylard Farm entrance to the park on Becher Bay Raod, a 248-acre waterfront property that was acquired by the region seven months ago.

With the recent purchase of two more pockets in the area, the park now has five miles of waterfront and is the largest waterfront park on the east coast of Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands.

Some 200 people, including several members of the Aylard family which had occupied the farm since 1916, attended Thursday's opening.

Fills Gap

Retired RCMP Superintendent Gordon Gerrie, 2493 Eastdowne, will take up duties today as interim police chief for Central Saanich. He replaces retiring Chief John Gelling, a 10-year veteran of the force. Gerrie will hold the post for about one month until a new chief is appointed.

Debut for a Princess

Gently nudging its way into Swartz Bay dock Thursday on first trip to Vancouver Island from downtown Vancouver is Canadian Pacific's new ferry Carrier Princess. Victoria civic officials will board 380-foot long ship at noon today for luncheon and reception and a short cruise. Built at North Vancouver's Burrard Shipyard, it has a maximum capacity of 50 truck trailers, or 30 railway cars or 150 private cars. Ship will operate from Swartz Bay to CPR docks at foot of Burrard in Vancouver. Crossing will take about three hours and will officially start Monday.

Committee Praises Whitbread Brief

Home Care Should Be Co-ordinated, Free

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

Whitbread
. . . urges uniformity

A brief submitted by Dr. J. L. N. Whitbread, chief medical officer for the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, drew praise from members of the provincial government's select standing committee on social welfare and education Thursday.

"You've been saying something we've been waiting to hear for 10 years," said Colin Gabelmann (NDP — North Vancouver-Seymour) after Whitbread read the brief, which outlined how home care should be delivered in the Greater Victoria area.

Home care in Victoria was inadequate for the needs of its large elderly population, Whitbread said, and should be co-ordinated and made available free to everyone.

Such a home care system should operate under the local board of health or the Capital Regional board of health, with funds and staff from present voluntary agencies being brought into the Greater Victoria Metropolitan health department, which now handles a large part of the co-ordination of health activities in the area.

Home care services and home care workers should follow uniform standards, Whitbread said, and the care provided should be comprehensive. With a good home care service, the number of people in private hospitals and rest homes would be reduced, as pensioners could continue to live in their own homes.

The G. R. Peakes Clinic for Handicapped Children made seven recommendations in its brief to the committee "with a view to pinpointing some of the gaps and inadequacies in service which exist," said John Bond, president of the clinic's board of directors.

The brief asked that there be improved services for the purchase and fitting of special equipment for handicapped children, and in particular, financial assistance from the government.

The brief also asked that temporary extended care be provided to relieve the parents of handicapped children, that special training be given for homemakers who will work with handicapped children and to day-care workers who will be supervising day-care programs which include handicapped children.

Activity centres and group homes for young handicapped people are needed as well, along with a day-care centre for school-age handicapped children not able to participate in the regular school system.

The B.C. Federation of Labor recommended that the government support a comprehensive health care system, including "all aspects of physical and emotional care delivered in emergency and long-term situations."

This health care system should cover such services as family life education, home care, home aid, preventive care, rehabilitation programs in community health clinics, housing facilities for handicapped senior citizens, ambulances, provision of artificial limbs, glasses, hearing aids and other equipment, prescription drugs and complete dental services.

Later in the morning session, committee members listened with a certain amount of amusement when Daniel Scoones, a representative of the Students International Meditation Society, explained how transcendental meditation could reduce the number of people in hospital beds.

The afternoon session began with a brief by a delegation from the Cariboo regional hospital district which outlined the nursing, home care and hospital needs of that area.

In his presentation to the committee, David Stewart of Victoria's Need Crisis Line described what his organization was doing and what needs in the community still had to be met.

The primary focus of Need, a 24-hour phone-in service, was crisis intervention, with about 80 per cent of calls being concerned with that, and 20 per cent requests for public information.

To provide a service as that given by the Community Information Service, which recently closed, Need would have to train two sets of volunteers, one to handle information calls, and the other to handle crisis calls.

At present the organization did not have the staff, facilities or funds to do that, he explained. The greatest need for his organization and others like it was some long-term funding so they could plan from year to year instead of month to month.

In Victoria there were four basic needs which Need volunteers had encountered; first, legal aid for those seeking divorces; second, some kind of follow-up for suicides; third, alternative programs for drug addicts other than methadone treatment; and fourth, sexual counselling.

Mary Bishop of the Family Planning Association of B.C. echoed Stewart's comment that there was a great need for sex counselling. The Family Planning Association provided this service, but only had limited resources to do so.

The association supported the concept of home care, said Mrs. Bishop, but it should include sexual counselling where necessary. Homemakers should be trained in the problems of sexuality, including birth control, infertility, genetics, and sexual relationships.

This kind of counselling could be done by both professional and lay people, the brief stated. "It's a whole new field," said Mrs. Bishop, "but it can be done by lay people — it's not that complicated."

Gloria Deming-Wrigley of the Victoria Women's Centre and Susan Talbot of the Community Action Group presented a brief on behalf of the Private Agency Committee, a coalition of 12 street-worker groups.

PAC is interested in the development of neighborhood advisory committees which would organize social services on a decentralized, community basis, with decisions being made by organizers and residents on the neighborhood level.

Services and administration would be located in neighborhood centres and determined by the local people, with self-help and elimination of bureaucracy being strongly emphasized in the organization of the centres.

An essential part of the neighborhood committee would be a liaison person whose main function would be to go out into the community and establish active contact with other neighborhood groups and agencies.

Another presentation was made by the Coast Foundation Society, a Vancouver organization which provides recreational and support services for psychiatric patients recently released from hospital.

Ottawan To Head Council

OTTAWA (UPI) — Economist Katherine Cooke will head the federal government's advisory council on the status of women, labor minister John Munro announced Thursday.

Dr. Cooke, of Ottawa, a regional manager in the department of regional economic expansion, will take charge of the 28-member council which Munro first announced in March.

Munro said the terms of reference for the committee were very general but would permit the council to advise him on matters relating to the status of women and would allow him to refer specific matters to the council for consideration.

The minister's idea of an advisory council has met with some criticism from women's groups across the country. They noted, in particular, that the royal commission on the status of women had recommended in 1970 that such a committee report directly to parliament rather than through a minister.

Munro said he was aware of this failing, but he noted he was giving the council the authority to publish its recommendations and reports independently. This should meet one of the objectives of the Royal commission's recommendation, he said.

He announced also he would reintroduce amendments to the Canada Labor Code which did not pass parliament last year.

He said the labor code would be amended "so that discrimination on the grounds of sex, age and marital status will be added to other prohibited grounds of discrimination by employers and unions coming under federal jurisdiction."

Legislation would also be introduced to improve pension and insurance schemes which discriminate against women, he said.

Similar changes would be made in regulations under the Fair Employment Practices Act, Munro said.

Schools Await Big Night

Recognition ceremonies will be held at two senior high schools of Greater Victoria tonight.

Two hundred and fifty members of Esquimalt secondary school's graduating class will take part in its ceremony starting at 7:45. Valedictorian is Thomas McEvay.

Farewell address will be given by principal Roy Temple, retiring after 27 years at Esquimalt high.

IGA Denies Tory Charge

'Independent Food Stores Guise for Cheaper Labor'

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs charged Thursday that IGA Canada Ltd. masquerades as a group of independent grocery stores in order to take advantage of using non-organized labor.

Yet despite the fact that it can use cheaper labor, IGA food prices are the same as in any of the big supermarket chains, James McGrath (PC —St. John's East) told the special Commons food price committee.

President Harold Knifton and vice-president M. H. Coulson of the Toronto-based company, the first of the company's big food retailers to appear before the committee, denied the suggestion.

Charges that IGA poses as a group of independent stores when it is in essence, like any other chain, would be "vehemently denied" by the 746 retailers who own IGA stores in Canada, Knifton said.

Earlier, he told Ron Atkey (PC—Toronto St. Paul's) that IGA was effectively owned by three wholesale companies— M. Loeb Ltd. of Ottawa, Oshawa Group Ltd. of Toronto, and H. Y. Louis Co. Ltd. of Vancouver.

Loeb and Oshawa, Knifton said, each own between 43 and 45 per cent of IGA and H. Y. Louis owns about 10 or 11 per cent. Seven other companies wholesale selling to the stores were subsidiaries of these three.

He said he would guess that about 50 per cent of the 746 stores were tied through various financing arrangements with the wholesalers who provide stores with capital to go into business at interest rates less than they could get from other sources.

Stores and wholesalers could end their relationships by giving 30 days notice.

Atkey asked how relevant the 30-day cut-off clause was if about half the stores had loans from wholesalers. Knifton replied that "from the practical point of view" the stores did not have that much freedom.

Knifton admitted that since IGA labor was not unionized, it was "somewhat cheaper" than other stores had to pay. In many cases, a retailer would have his wife and children working for him.

Much of the questioning was non-provocative and McGrath was one of the few to complain that the committee found out nothing related to increasing food costs from the witnesses.

It would be necessary, he said, to summon the IGA wholesalers to get down to facts and figures.

Margaret Trudeau Visiting London

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's wife, Margaret, is to attend a special Commonwealth Day service today at Westminster Abbey and, later in the day, will hear Canada's National Arts Centre orchestra perform in Queen Elizabeth Hall.

Saturday she is to be the guest of Prime Minister Edward Heath at the trooping the color ceremony.

Mrs. Trudeau arrived in London earlier this week from a continental holiday and is to remain in Britain a week visiting friends.

'Impractical'

Stewardesses Criticize Garb

TORONTO (CP) — Some Air Canada stewardesses are petitioning against the lack of quality, styling and price of their new uniforms, unveiled by the airline earlier this week.

Stewardessess Willie Uvenhoven and Rutheanne Snell, both 22, said a "haphazardous" petition has been posted at Air Canada offices here and they expect four-fifths of the Toronto-based stewardesses to sign a formal petition.

The uniforms, which cost a total of $800,000, comprise 50 different garments and accessories which can be combined into more than 300 separate combinations.

Winnipeg stewardesses also made public their dissatisfaction with the new wardrobe, saying they are too impractical, especially the three-inch heels.

The stewardesses complained the new outfitts do not look like uniforms and will make it difficult to separate them from passengers.

Self-Reliance for Elderly

St. John Course Effective

The future of St. John Ambulance looks fantastic, says British Columbia executive director Charles Simpson.

Simpson, addressing the provincial government's select standing committee on social welfare and education in Victoria Wednesday, spoke enthusiastically about St. John's year-old streamlined course which contributes to patient care in the home and hospital.

He said usefulness of the 12-hour nationally-certified course showed up in preliminary screening of applicants seeking employment at hospitals.

He said course graduates were able to relate to the patient and were capable of dealing effectively with emergencies.

Under the Local Initiatives Program, elderly people have been taking the same course and Simpson said feedback had been good.

"It's an excellent vehicle to ensure senior citizens who are self-reliant stay that way and it also makes them more self-sufficient when they are released from hospital," he said.

The course is flexible, and price varies accoriding to the group and modifications involved.

Simpson said St. John Ambulance has personnel to conduct the courses in many British Clumbioa communities including Victoria, Vancouver and Prince George.

In answer to a question from committee member Pat Jordan (SC-North Okanagan), Simpson said the society could provide community emergency first aid centres on a 24-hour basis if funds were available.

"There are a number of first aid stations on Vancouver Island situated in gas stations and corner stores along the highway. And they're all operated by volunteer service," Simpson told the committee.

He said St. John Ambulance would like to see all teachers trained in first aid to handle the interval after an accident occurs until professional help arrives.

"That's a definite money-saver," he said.

Simpson said St. John volunteer service has been running since the Crusades and although it's becoming more difficult to entice volunteers "so far we've been successful."

The need is there but "it's harder to stimulate young people to get involved."

Dress Rehearsal

Lace-trimmed wedding dress she wore 60 years ago for marriage in Metropolitan United Church will again be donned by Mrs. G. W. Robinson, of 3069 Henderson, when she and her husband celebrate diamond anniversary at their home Monday. Both Manitoba-born, they've spent 70 years in Victoria where Robinson is well-known businessman. Reception will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. and 8 to 10 p.m.

IODE's Future Looking Rosy

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire is hoping to sell at least 75,000 rosebushes at $3.50 a bush to mark its 75th anniversary in 1975.

The money will be used by provincial chapters to help children.

The goal was announced Wednesday on the final day of the IODE annual meeting.

Mrs. Bruce Butler of Toronto, anniversary secretary, said only two chapters have definite projects in mind now for the anniversary.

Manitoba will continue to help children with impaired hearing. They have already bought the machine for testing hearing aids.

Ontario will fund a study in the field of genetic medicine. The rose is a red floribunda developed for the IODE.

In a new project, IODE chapters will be linked with nursing stations in remote areas to try to provide whatever they are asked for.

Mrs. Peter Douglas of Toronto said chapters may be sending toys or craft materials to the stations or helping to buy equipment and supplies.

Mrs. K. J. C. Dean of Toronto was re-elected president.

Ship-of-Sail Opera House To Be Launched

By JAMES MELLEN
Colonist-Gemini Service

SYDNEY, Australia — Unbelievably, Sydney's Opera House is just about complete —a £57 million piece of real estate bought with the lottery tickets of the people of New South Wales. It is a cultural killing.

Gaze down on it from a skyscraper, stand in front of the intermission foyer, the blue sea in front of you, or take a ferry from Circular Quay and see it surrounded by water — proportion, color, and setting all fearfully pleasing — and the building could be a boat.

You could even indulge in the fantasy that she will set sail, in some legendary future. Robert Morley, recently acting in Sydney, was reminded more of sharks — four angry and two retreating.

By cutting a ribbon Oct. 20 Queen Elizabeth will set off a great hooting of ferries, tugs, and pleasure craft, a howl from thousands lining the harbour, fireworks, and quite a few sentimental tears.

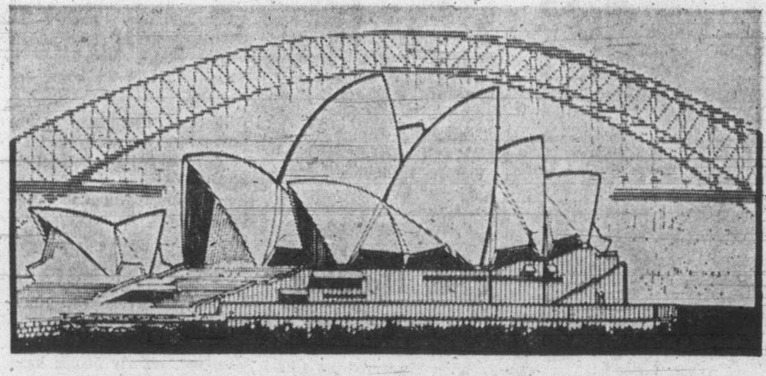
The opening committees want to create the impression of the Queen launching a great ship of sail — "the billowing sails of the opera house will be draped with giant colored ribbons attached to buoys and then to four tugs in the harbor. With the cutting of the ceremonial ribbon, the tugs will pull away and thus simulate the launching."

Simple as the exterior may look, the bowels of the building are hugely complex. They contain an engine room that could belong to the biggest battleship, throbbing with noises and bristling with instrument panels: for moving, lifting, cooling, televising, everything.

The building has 54 air-conditioning systems. Five miles of steel pipe will carry sea water, cooled or heated, throughout. A car could drive through the ductwork.

A team of Australian architects took over from Joern Utzon, the Dane who won the competition in 1957 and resigned in 1964. One of them, Peter Hall, is particularly proud of the seats he designed. They are in white birch, red leather in one hall, magenta wool in another, charcoal in a third.

The left leg of each contains a hydraulic plunger for silent motion. For earphone translation, no plug-in is needed.



There is induction by radio along the floor.

I asked Hall: "Is this going to be a great building of the world?"

"I'm far too close to it now to tell. I don't know if it's simple enough to be a great building. Le Corbusier's high court at Chandigarh in Punjab, or his chapel, at Ronchamp, or Frank Lloyd Wright's Johnson Wax building — they're great buildings because they're small and simple."

□

Hall has a Frank-Lloyd-Wright look about him: small, with the eyes that flash depth and humor at the same time, long wisps of hair.

"Let's face it, this is not an opera house. It's an arts centre. We've had to provide for so many things it's become a very complex building.

"I've tried very hard to retain simplicity by limiting shapes and structures, getting as much uniformity as possible. I think greatness will hang on whether it is simple enough after all.

"Utzon's concept was to create shapes and fit in what you can. If I had designed from the start, I would have studied what had to happen inside the building first. The shape would have emerged afterwards."

Why had it taken 15 years?

"Fifteen years is a very short time for a project of this scale. It could have taken 20 with conventional contracts."

Utzon's exterior cost only £17 million, Hall's interiors and glass walls have cost £40 million. Why had that been?

"Putting in one and a half acres of glass, sound and heat resistant, was a bigger job than the concreting of those sails. Concrete is much better known as a material than glass.

"The circulation, acoustics, seating, volume and load limitations — all had problem after problem. The stage machinery alone cost $6½ million (Australian).

An important factor will be the building's public image. G. F. Freudenstein, minister for cultural activities for New South Wales, will be vetting what can and can't go in the Opera House.

He puts it this way: "Two things are implicit in the term 'opera house' which we wish to keep right out. One is snobbishness. The other is the idea that only operas are performed there. Many entertainments will be shown."

In fact, the place is going to jump. Pop groups are being signed on.

The line has been drawn at presenting wrestling matches on the grounds that athletic entertainment should not be confused with artistic entertainment.

"We want this to be the kind of building where people can spend all their waking hours if they could benefit by it," says David Brown, of the Sydney Opera House Trust.

The art gallery, 7000 square feet of it, will hold motor shows. Congresses and conventions will be welcomed.

There are reception rooms ideal for weddings. Anyone can hire a hall appropriate to his needs. And cheaply. The government will subsidize the place by an annual £1 million out of the £1.75 million needed to run it.

The opening performance will be a mixed program of music and drama. Two days later the first opera, Prokofiev's War and Peace, will be presented.

Completion of an expensive building and massive celebration will perform no magic. The crunch will come over its existence as a cultural centre.

The Sydney Opera House Trust, putting on an optimistic face, bases its hopes on government subsidies that will attract great international talent; it hopes too, to draw back the many brilliant expatriates who have been contributing to culture abroad.

At its worst . . . there will always be a superb sight for anyone taking the ferry from Circular Quay.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Our neighbors have a retarded son. He is about 12 or 13 years old but his behaviour level is around five. He is a very sweet child, pleasant and polite, but it is apparent he is mentally defective.

The reason I am writing is that his 15-year-old sister is ashamed of the lad and doesn't want her boy friends to see him. She is afraid it will damage her socially. When she brings boys home from school she insists that her brother stay in his room, out of sight.

The parents insist they don't want their normal children to suffer because of the retarded child, so they have gone along with the girl's request. My husband and I think it is appalling. Please state your views, Ann. We know they read your column every day. —Problem.

Dear Prob: The girl's attitude was shaped long before she had boy friends, and it is a sad commentary on the upbringing she received from her parents. That young lady should have been taught many years ago that her brother is a very special child and he needs extra love and understanding. I hope those parents will check their phone book for the address of the Association for the Retarded and request their literature. They need educating.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are so mad we could chew nails. We bought a new car 17 months ago. It cost us a lot more money than we had a right to pay, but we decided it would be cheaper than a second-hand model in the long run. We've had that new car in the garage three times since January. The last repair bill was $45. Please don't tell us to take it back to the dealer. We tried. He isn't interested in complaints. Just trades or sales. What can we do? Will the customer EVER get a break when it comes to car repairs? —Squeezed By A Lemon

Dear Squeezed: Contact the Better Business Bureau and give them chapter and verse. They do a splendid job of making people straighten up and fly right. Let's hope that one day we will get the same break the consumer gets in Sweden. Garages must guarantee all repair work for 3,125 miles or three months — whichever comes first. Wouldn't that be beautiful?

M.V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

For those homeowners with only a few square yards of flower beds to fill, the easy way to produce a good display is simply to buy some bedding annuals and bung them in.

Judging by my mail, though, quite a few of my regular readers are getting just a little bit fed up with this business of buying and setting out hundreds of plants in the spring, then pulling up and discarding them in the fall.

These folks — mostly homeowners with fairly extensive gardens — are beginning to look with more and more interest at the herbaceous perennials. These are the permanent flowering plants that die down in the fall but sprout again from the hardy roots again the following spring.

Ordinarily, a bed or border of perennial flowers is started by purchasing the plants or roots and setting them out either in the spring or the fall. One of the hard facts of life, though, is that perennials cost a great deal more than bedding annuals, and it is a rather expensive business to furnish a big border in this way.

Thoroughbred peonies, for instance, cost $1 to $1.50 each, phiniums 65 cents, lythrum 90 phiniums 65 cents, lythru m90 cents, Shasta daisies 60 to 85 cents, day lilies $1.50 and bearded iris anywhere from 75 cents to $3 each — and you need a lot of them to make a good showing.

This is for good stuff, of course — there is plenty of bargain-counter junk around — but when shopping for perennial plants which are to be your garden companions for many years to come, it is false economy to buy anything but the best.

Because of the high cost of large-scale planting, then, I have had quite a few inquiries lately asking whether perennial flowering plants can be raised from seeds. They can. Any plant that blooms and sets seed, from a pansy to an oak tree, can be raised from seed. Whether it is a practicable and worthwhile proposition is another matter.

length of time you have to wait for a perennial plant to start blooming. While some kinds are fairly quick and easy, others may take seven years or more before you see your first flower. The peony is a good example, taking four to five years from seed, and after all that long wait, the flowers may turn out to be the unwanted single blooms rather than the doubles, and in a color you don't like.

The trick, then, in raising perennials from seed is to stick to the easy doers and to those which can be counted on to start blooming in their second year.

Fortunately, there are some pretty good ones that meet these specifications, and I will be naming and describing them in future articles.

I must make it clear, though, that there is always an element of chance in seed-grown plants; they may come shorter or taller than you wish, single instead of double blooms, and there is no guarantee as to color.

This element of chance works both ways, of course. While some of your seed-grown perennials may turn out hopeless duds when they come into bloom, there is always the possibility you may get a real super-dooper, as good if not better than any of the expensive named varieties. After all, every new variety was grown from a seed, the result of either a planned or a chance mating between two older varieties. And if you DO hit the jackpot in this way, your name may go down in horticultural history, like Viola Maggie Mott, Chrysanthemum Fred Shoesmith or Delphinium Alice Artindale.

Seeds are cheap, and from a 50-cent packet you will get far more plants than you could possibly use, so the trick is to discard the duds ruthlessly when they come into bloom, keeping only the most pleasing of the batch for planting out in your perennial beds and borders.

Jack Smith

Recently I've been plagued by a series of minor accidents that seem to happen curiously enough, on weekends when my wife isn't home.

First a greasy skillet caught fire on the electric range and burned out the hood. A week or so later the living room draperies knocked over a brass floor lamp, shattering the globe. On both of these occasions my wife returned from long excursions on which she had experienced no untoward incidents at all.

The annoying thing about this run of luck is that I am neither careless nor clumsy. I may sometimes be a bit absent-minded, but that is understandable. There's never a moment when my mind is not at work on one dilemma or another.

Last weekend, when my wife went away, I decided to be especially careful. I was bogged down at home with work, and it seemed reasonable to expect that I could keep the house intact. The devil would find no work for busy hands.

It was Saturday morning that I put the whistling teakettle on to make some tea. The teakettle was a beauty; of Swedish make, I believe, white enameled steel with a pattern of blue, red and yellow flowers.

It had a splendid whistle, but somehow, this time, I neglected to stick the whistle on the spout. Sometime later, wondering why I hadn't heard it, I hurried into the kitchen to see what was wrong. The water had boiled away. The kettle was on the verge of turning red. It was fused to the red-hot burner. I grabbed a potholder and yanked it free; but too late. Its bottom was holed; its pretty flowers had turned brown.

★ ★ ★

I sat down to think it over. There was nothing really wrong with me. I was merely a victim of an unlikely string of mishaps. My luck would turn.

Meanwhile, I wondered, why was it that my wife never broke anything? She sometimes left dishes stacked like the Tower of Pisa. She could not be made to respect the principle of potential energy. Yet nothing ever fell. She had a guardian angel.

If only, I prayed, she would break something on this trip — just a saucer, maybe; or a cheap little teacup — something to show her that accidents can happen to anyone.

I took the ruined teakettle down to the garage and dropped it in the trash. A plan had formed. I would simply go out and buy a new one exactly like it, and no one would ever be the wiser. I am not given to petty dishonesties, but I didn't want her to worry about my mind.

Unfortunately, the store where I'd bought the teakettle didn't have one exactly like it. They had the same pattern, but only in a smaller size. I bought it anyway. She might not notice the difference. If she did, I could point out that things often looked smaller than they used to, when you'd been away. If she insisted, I'd simply tell her it was her mind that was going, not mine.

Saturday night I went out to a banquet and came home to find that I'd forgotten to leave my telephone answering machine turned on. I phoned one of my sons to see if anything was new.

"Where've you been?" he said. He sounded calm, but I sensed an undercurrent. "We've been trying to get you all night."

"What is it?"

"Mother phoned."

That was strange. The nearest phone was more than an hour away from where she was staying. It could have been an emergency. Something was wrong.

"What is it?" I said.

"She broke her leg."

★ ★ ★

He had been at work and his wife had got the call. She is a graduate student in physical therapy and had taken it with professional poise. My wife had fallen on the rocks in the tidepools. Friends had taken her over a dirt road to a doctor and were to take her back to their house, her leg in a cast.

"Do you know how to adjust crutches?" my daughter-in-law asked.

I decided to wait until morning to drive down after her. But I didn't sleep well. I kept telling myself it wasn't my fault. All I had asked for, remember, was a broken saucer, or a teacup. I didn't expect a leg.

If you insist — as so many of you do — on yet another of those "in-common" quizzes, here's the last one for a while. The questions are straining my resources as much as the answers are straining yours. Half right is a highly satisfactory score. What do the following have in common:

1. King Alfonso VIII of Spain, King Carol II of Romania, King Humbert II of Italy, Mohammed VI of Turkey, and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands.

2. The Card Party, Orpheus, The Fairy's Kiss, Balustrade, and Appollon Musagete.

3. Coverdale, Knox, Matthew, Taverner, and Tyndale.

4. The University of Akron, Cornell University, the University of Denver, Syracuse University, and the University of Toledo.

5. Fang, Shallow, Dogberry, Elbow, and Verges.

6. Benjamin Harrison, Stephen Douglas, Gen. George B. McClennan, Fiorello La Guardia, and Martin Van Buren.

7. Abraham, Sarah, Israel, Peter, and Paul.

8. Berguaray, Asiago, Cambridge, Fontina and Liptauer.

9. Jay, Rutledge, Ellsworth, Marshall, and Taney.

10. Shechem, Hebron, Kadesh, Bezer, and Golan.

11. Gawain, the courteous; Gareth, the big-handed; Kay, the rude and boastful; Mark, the dastard; and Modred, the traitor.

12. Set, Loki, Asmodeus, Ahriman, and Nix.

13. Ogden and Richards; Berle and Means; Russell and Whitehead; Durant and Durant; Beaumont and Fletcher.

14. A cete, a sleuth, a sedge, a skulk, and a sounder.

5. Comical law officers in Shakespeare's plays. 6. All bore the sobriquet "Little." ("Little Ben," "Little Giant," "Little Mac," "Little Flower," and Little Matty.") 7. Biblical characters who changed their names (from Abram, Sarai, Jacob, Simon, and Saul).

$1,000 Budget Reduction

CBC Token Cut Wrist Slap

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons' broadcasting committee rapped the CBC lightly on the knuckles Wednesday when it voted to cut the public corporation's 1973-74 operating budget by a token $1,000.

Quebec MP Harold Herbert (L—Vaudreuil), sponsor of the motion, described the cut as a symbolic attempt to register general dissatisfaction with the CBC, "particularly with regard to the handling of separatist French programming in the province of Quebec."

The motion was intended to indicate the power of the taxpayers' elected representatives over the life of the CBC.

Outside the committee, Herbert said the cut was primarily aimed at the corporation's French-language news and commentary.

"The majority of Quebecers feel that there is far too much attention paid to the separatist element in Radio Canada news broadcasts," he said.

He argued that the CBC is supported by taxpayers and has no right to present a one-sided view of news events — a minority view that most viewers do not share.

The motion carried by a narrow margin, with one New Democrat and five Liberals supporting it and three Conservatives and two Liberals voting against it.

Gilles Marceau, parliamentary secretary to Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner, the minister responsible for the CBC, said he feared approval of the $1,000 cut would be interpreted as a vote of non-confidence in the CBC's board of directors and corporation president Laurent Picard.

Herbert said the motion was an attempt to express support for Picard's efforts to re-organize many elements of the corporation.

Dancers Trip to Sunny Clime for Training

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

An exciting summer lies ahead for nine young Victoria dancers for, with their teacher, Wynne Shaw, they will attend a five-week summer school of the dance in Estoril, near Lisbon in Portugal.

They will attend the International Academy of Dance Gosta Do Sol, founded in 1970 by the internationally-famous ballet couple, Anna-Marie and David Holmes.

These two have danced as a pair with the major ballet companies of the world, including the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad, and discovered in their travels the need for a school to specialize in the advanced training of gifted students.

Nowhere except in Russia, it appeared, was there any school to prepare these students for the transition from academic training to a professional career.

In the wake of repeated requests from many parts of the world by students asking where they could go for this training, the Holmses formed this international academy — designed especially for those who are seriously intent upon a professional career.

Teachers at the academy are chosen carefully for their varied and successful backgrounds in professional theatre. Many are still active, perhaps as premier dancers or prima ballerinas with well-known companies.

Intensive training is the keynote of the summer session, but there is also time for recreation and sightseeing.

Selected students are taken into the corps de ballet of the school's own classical company, in which their teachers may take the lead roles.

This company performs several ballets each year in the Lisbon Summer Festival, and at Sintra in Portugal as well.

Both Anna-Marie and David call the southwest corner of British Columbia home. Anna-Marie is from Mission City, David from Vancouver. A few years ago, before her career took her to Europe, Anna-Marie was a student for a time with Wynne Shaw, and the two have retained close ties ever since.

Anna-Marie has, in fact, danced here. As a student, she was one of the ballet dancers in Die Fliedermaus, a presentation of Victoria Operatic Society when it was still the Gilbert and Sullivan Society.

The nine girls who are going know they face a period of hard work, for the academy operates exactly as a professional company would during the season. Before they're through, they'll know if a career as a professional dancer is for them, or not.

Cherrill Andrews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. W. Andrews, 1550 Oak Park Pl., Saanich; Susan Blades, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Blades, 2303 Epworth, Oak Bay; Joy Butterfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Butterfield, 1989 Waterloo, Saanich; Katy Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Clark, 1010 Moss; Colleen DeCorte, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. DeCorte, 982 Wollaston, Esquimalt; Kathie Duncan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Duncan, 1136 Wychbury, Esquimalt; Pam Ferguson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Ferguson, 1661 Cyril Close; Lauren MacLeod, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. MacLeod, 3125 Cadboro Bay Road, Oak Bay; Robyn Richards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Richards, 219 Howe.

The group leaves Victoria June 21 by air, and arrives in Estoril the following day. Their session will take them through to the end of July.

'Can't Take It With You'

Wealthy Angelenos Made Mansions Public

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Harold, Will, Edward, and William each arrived at the same conclusion when it came to that universal topic — you can't take it with you.

Millionaires all — silent film comic Harold Lloyd, humorist Will Rogers, oil tycoon Edward Doheny, and chewing gum king William Wrigley — each made some arrangements that their lavish mansions in Los Angeles be thrown open to the public upon their death.

Will Rogers' heirs were the first to give the public a break in the 1950s. And today the Polo Grounds and giant Ranch Estate is a popular state park secluded in the foothills and eucalyptus groves of the Pacific Palisades. Thousands each year tour this fascinating home of one of America's best-loved humorists.

This spring, tourist buses began winding up a sun-dappled Beverly Hills hillside, toward the splendid Mediterranean estate of film comic Harold Lloyd, the bumbling, loveable hero with the straw hat and owlish spectacles.

His grand, Italianesque mansion sits amid a cool, park-like setting, 16 rooms in all, spread over 16 acres. The tranquil estate is a cluster of exotic trees and shrubs, big formal gardens, splashing pools, sunny stretches of manicured lawn and a Roman fountain that played a big part in the superstitious life of the slender, silent-era funnyman.

"The only time he would ever walk or drive around that fountain," recalls a former employee today, "was the night he died."

Known as Greenacres, the luxurious Lloyd estate was constructed for $2 million in the pre-tax era when a 30-room beach house was lightly known as a cottage. Lloyd's mansion was, as they said in the movie Sunset Boulevard, "the kind of place that crazy movie people built in the crazy '20s."

A short drive east, in the opulent, terraced foothills of Bel-Air, where mansions are thick as trees, is the Greystone Estate, an English Tudor-style home with ghostly gables, a dark slate roof, a real brick courtyard and the quiet scent of wealth.

Oil tycoon Edward Doheny, one of the nation's biggest at the turn of the century, spent $4 million to create for his son what architects typify as the California Baronial. The mansion, today a Beverly Hills city park, has 55 rooms — with great, gaping hallways and hand-sculpted balustrades — and was four years in construction.

Greystone, once part of the vast 400-acre Doheny estate overlooking a young Los Angeles, was the family home until the Dohenys left in 1955. A group of concerned citizens then paid $1 million for it rather than see it subdivided into an expensive tract.

Today it is occupied by the American Film Institute, which has installed bright, young filmmakers and their machinery in the bedrooms and bathrooms of one of the last of America's oil tycoons.

The house that chewing gum built is on the other side of town where William Wrigley spent a small fortune for a sprawling two-storey mansion on Pasadena's Millionaire's Row.

The Chicago-born chewing gum king and his wife, Ada, moved into the splendid white mansion in 1914 when shiny black carriages and high-stepping trotters clip-clopped down Orange Grove Boulevard and the scent of citrus groves lay thickly in the air.

Today the big home with handsome Spanish tiles, wrought iron balconies and a blaze of colorful roses is the permanent home of the Tournament of Roses Association, the popular staging area for the New Year's Day parade.

Half-hour guided tours of the house and Rose Tournament museum are given free on Wednesday afternoons, and have been since the early 1960s.

Newspapers Feel Actress Coddled

The blonde star, who was Henry Kissinger's date at the Academy Awards ceremony in March, was spared Norway's mandatory jail term for a drunken driving conviction.

Newspapers this week reported the conviction of Miss Ullmann, an Oscar nominee for her role in The Emigrants. They also recalled that a housewife got the mandatory 21 days in jail and a $1,725 fine for the same conviction in February.

Miss Ullman was fined $3,450 but her jail term was suspended.

In 1972, the actress stopped at a police roadblock while driving home from a party, and a policeman asked her to take a blood test to determine the amount of alcohol in her system. She failed and was convicted of drunken driving and sentenced to the jail term.

In an appeal case, two doctors, both close friends of the actress, testified that Miss Ullmann was "deeply depressed" and added that a jail term would cause "irreparable damage" to her health.

The Norwegian Supreme Court suspended the lower court jail sentence and turned down an appeal May 19 by the state prosecutor.

Old Vic Returns To Stage

Further indication of the rising interest in live theatre comes with the announcement that the Old Vic Players, inactive for some time in the area of three-act plays, is returning to that field this month.

At 8 p.m. on the nights of June 22 and 23 they will present the three-act farce, Pool's Paradise by Philip King, in the Cridge hall of Church of Our Lord, at Blanshard and Humboldt.

Directing the show is Gwen Hewlings, producer is Dawn Scott, and members of the cast are Pat Denny, Greg Finnegan, Dawn Scott, Mrs. A. D'Altroy, Graham Thomson, Douglas Sheepwash and Basil Wallace.

Additional help in preparing the play has come from others of the players, and from members of the Church of Our Lord itself.

48 Killed

Indian Jet Wiped Out

NEW DELHI (AP) — An Indian Airlines Boeing 707, behind schedule and trying to land in a dust storm, crashed and burned Thursday night near the New Delhi airport.

At least 48 of the 65 persons aboard were killed, Indian Airlines officials said.

The twin-engine jetliner, carrying several important Indian government officials, apparently broke apart before crashing. It slammed into a sand bank near an upper-class residential area.

The pilot, Captain G. P. B. Nair, said from a hospital bed that the jetliner suddenly dipped as he made his approach to the airport on the flight from Madras, India. He said he could not recall what happened after that.

Airport sources said they were not certain what caused the crash, but that they suspected the cabin pressure might have been too high in the descending aircraft. They would not elaborate.

The plane was a half-hour late when it radioed the control tower for its approach. Delhi-based reporter V. K. Madhavan Kutty, one of the survivors, said it broke apart with a loud noise, hit the ground and burst into flames.

Another survivor, V. M. Janardhan, said the plane appeared to hit something in the air. It bumped violently, jerked and split along the aisle, he said. Janardhan is an Indian Airlines official.

The Blob Turns Up In New York State

SPENCERPORT, N.Y. (UPI) — The Blob has arrived in New York state.

George Miller, a soils expert, said the latest blob was a fungus, and can be destroyed by raking the soil around it, allowing it to dry out.

Barrett: U.K. Visit Goes Well

LONDON (CP) — Refusing to give any details of his meetings Thursday with British officials, Premier Barrett of B.C. would say only that "things are going very well."

He said any announcements or comments on his goodwill trip would be made at a news conference today.

An audience with Queen Elizabeth and an informal session with Labor leader Harold Wilson highlighted Thursday's events.

Among government officials he visited were John Nott, minister of state for the treasury, and Lord Limerick, parliamentary undersecretary of state for trade.

The premier was the luncheon guest of Anthony Kershaw, parliamentary undersecretary of state for foreign and Commonwealth affairs, and in the evening attended a private dinner given by Sir Dennis Lawson, chairman of Algoma Central Railway.

After his news conference, Barrett meets representatives of British Steel Corp. and with his wife will be the guest of the Lord Mayor of London.

He leaves here Saturday to continue his European visit, with stops scheduled in Paris, Vienna, Munich, Frankfurt, Dusseldorf, Bonn and Amsterdam.

Pipeline Suit Launched

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A $501 million class-action lawsuit has been filed against the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., charging the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline is "inherently unsafe, conceptually unsound and illegal."

The suit filed in state superior court on behalf of engineer Barry Donnellan, says that if the pipeline is built according to current plans, it would fail, "threatening irreparable harm and injury to the people of the state of Alaska."

In a prepared news release Thursday, Anchorage attorney Edgar Paul Boyko and Donnellan, a Boyko business associate, alleged there was "a conspiracy of silence" on public discussion of the pipeline's design.

Also named as defendants were Commissioner of Natural Resources Charles Herbert and Environmental Conservation Commissioner Max Brewer.

The suit seeks more than $1 million in damages for Donnellan and "all other professional engineers similarly situated," and more than $500 million in damages for Donnellan and "all other taxpayers" in the class.

Warden, Deputy Slain

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The warden and deputy warden of Holmesburg prison were stabbed to death Thursday during a grievance hearing on prayer services with two Black Muslim inmates, one serving a life term for the murder of a policeman and the other accused of a police killing.

A guard captain also was stabbed before the two prisoners were subdued by guards with clubs in a fierce battle in which both were injured seriously.

Warden Patrick Curran, 48, and Deputy Warden Robert Fromhold, 51, both stabbed in the chest, were pronounced dead at Nazareth hospital.

Guard Capt. Leroy Taylor, 49, was reported in good condition at Nazareth with stab wounds in the back, and the two inmates, identified as Joseph Bowen and Fred Burton, were under heavy police guard at Philadelphia General Hospital.

Bowen, 25, had a ruptured spleen and a broken arm, and Burton, 26, suffered severe head injuries, a hospital spokesman said.

Press Lauded for 'Innate Discretion'

The spotlight swung to the press Thursday in Victoria Provincial Court after a lawyer defending a man charged with attempted capital murder asked that facts and evidence "that might be prejudicial" not be published.

The case involved George Burton, 57, of 1450 Mount Newton Cross Road, charged with attempted capital murder in the stabbing April 30 of John Gelling, who submitted his resignation this week as Central Saanich police chief.

Burton, a Central Saanich resident, had been charged May 1 and remanded to Thursday for psychiatric examination. A further remand to June 18 to complete the examination was granted Thursday by Judge William Ostler after testimony by a doctor.

Lawyer Brian Smith, stressing the press is "very fair in these matters," asked Ostler if there could be some request to the three reporters in court to prevent publication of facts and evidence which might prejudice possible court hearings later.

Ostler said he had never seen a case where the press reported such items but agreed with Smith there was nothing in the Criminal Code of Canada allowing "categorical instructions to the press and perhaps that's all to the good."

The judge added: "I have always depended upon the innate discretion and good sense of the press and I have never been disappointed."

He said he felt sure the press would print facts and evidence "if there was some overwhelming reason in the public interest," regardless of what he might say. But he had "sufficient confidence" to believe there would be no reports of this "sensitive" matter.

A survey of the two newspaper reporters and one radio broadcaster in court at the time showed none had planned to go into any detail on the remand, anyway.

Provincial COURT

"I am going to be as lenient as I can in the circumstances," Judge William Ostler said Thursday in Victoria Provincial Court to a 23-year-old Victoria man facing sentence for his third narcotics conviction.

The man, Kenneth Frederick Clements of 775 Hillside, pleaded guilty May 18 to a charge of possession of a small amount of hashish late May 10 when Victoria police checked him in the 1100 block Langley. He also admitted two previous narcotics convictions.

Thursday, he testified he had decided to obey narcotics laws and his boss at a lumber mill testified Clements had an excellent work record from Aug. 12, 1972, until his arrest.

Ostler said he was "sympathetic" and would be "very lenient in the hope that you mean what you say." But because of the repeated violations of the law, he had to impose a jail term of two months to be followed by one year of probation.

Bail was set at $2,500 by Ostler for Rodney Kevin Steigenberger, 19, of 256 Atkins, on a Victoria charge of robbery with violence that will go to trial July 13 before Judge F. S. Green.

Steigenberger had been due to appear Monday for the trial, resulting from a $321 robbery from a Victoria man last April 11 in the 1000 block Wharf. He said he had been working in northern B.C. and had been unable to raise enough money for a return before Wednesday.

He had previously been out on $1,000 bail pending the trial last Monday but action has begun for the crown to recover that amount.

Irvine Kamsvaag, held at Wilkinson Road jail in Saanich pending a Duncan trial next week for theft, told Ostler he was unable to get copies of the Criminal Code and Bill of Rights or writing paper at the jail so he could prepare his defence.

The judge asked prosecutor Gordon Macdonald to find out what facilities the jail had and report back today. Ostler said he was not being critical or interfering — he simply wanted to know what was available "so we will know what to do in future."

A suspended sentence and a one-year probationary term were ordered by Ostler for Mrs. Elizabeth Dee Potter, 26, of 1559 Pembroke. She pleaded guilty May 18 to a five-count Victoria charge of theft involving less than $200 — the shoplifting May 17 from five Victoria department stores of 33 items worth a total of $72.59.

□

A fine of $250 was set for Mrs. Ann Edwards, 49, of 2245 Victor, who pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of theft involving less than $200 — the shoplifting May 12 from the K-Mart store of seven items worth a total of $6.82.

□

William Currie Addison, 46, of 777 Fort, was fined $100 following his plea of guilty to a charge of possession of a narcotic — a small amount of marijuana found Wednesday when police checked him in the 1100 block Langley.

□

Kim Frederick Beith, 18, address not known, was fined $75 after he pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of breach of probation. He was put on probation for two years in May, 1972, and received permission last September to work in the Queen Charlotte Islands but failed to report to his Victoria probation officer between September and last month.

□

Carlos Costa Galego, 19, of 3307 Shelbourne, was fined $50 after he pleaded guilty May 14 to a Victoria charge of mischief after the youth put a fist through the front door of Shanks' Saddlery, 2801 Douglas, May 12. Galego also was instructed to pay $79.62 for the damage.

□

In the court section of Judge Green, Stephen Walter Curry, 17, of 2065 Avondale, was fined $250 and put on probation for one year. He pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of theft involving less than $200 laid after three persons took a $100 engine Feb. 16 from a car on West Saanich Road.

9 IN MEMORIAM

CAREY — In loving memory of a wonderful husband and pal, who passed away one year ago on June 1st, 1972.

When I am sad and lonely
And everything goes wrong,
I seem to hear you whisper
"Cheer up dear, and carry on".
Each time I see your photo,
You seem to smile and say
"Don't cry, I'm only sleeping, We'll meet again some day."

—Ever loved and remembered by his wife, Randi and sons, Philip, Maitland, and his family.

HUTCHISON — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, William Hutchison, who passed away June 1st, 1971.

The pearly gates were opened
A gentle voice said "come,"
And with farewells unspoken
He gently entered home.

—His loving wife Emma, and daughter Mrs. Hoey (Hilda) and Family.

SMITH — In loving memory of Frank Hitchens Smith, who passed away June 1, 1970.

Quietly remembered every day,
Sadly missed along life's way;
Just as you were, you will always be,
Treasured in our memory.

—Your loving family — Bill, Chris, Gladys, Gordon, Hilda, Wilfred and Grandchildren, Brian, Stephen, Richard and Diana.

SOMMERFIELD — In loving memory of a dear son and brother Allen, who passed away June 1, 1967.

A cluster of precious memories.
Sprinkled with love and tears,
Wishing God had spared you
If only for a few more years.
You left a beautiful memory,
And sorrow to great to be hold,
And to us who loved and lost you,
Your memory will never grow old.

—Lovingly remembered by Mom, Lue, Ruth, Bob, and Bill and families.

ALL SORTS: The CBC is reported to have set up two "top level task forces" to determine new directions for variety and drama on the network. There is said to be special concern over what is wrong with CBC variety and how to salvage it. I can only wish them luck.

Three years ago, the cost of running an average one-minute commercial on U.S. network evening shows was $65,000. This coming season it will be $85,000 and the price for All in the Family will be $120,000. Top price of all is $200,000 for each minute commercial during the Superbowl.

ABC's daytime drama specials have worked so well that CBS plans to copy them . . . cast of the syndicated TV version of the old radio comedy It Pays to Be Ignorant will include Joe Flynn, JoAnne Worley, Billy Baxter and Charles Nelson Reilly.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Thursday's answer—The real person who lived from 1846 to 1916 and was played in movies by James Ellison, Joel McCrea, Louis Calhern, Charlton Heston and Guy Stockwell was William Frederick Cody, much better known as Buffalo Bill. Calhern was Buffalo Bill in the only musical about him, Annie Get Your Gun..

Today's question—Name the actor who lived from 1920 to 1966, became a star in The Search and played Freud in 1963. In what famous war movie did he play a moving Taps? The answer Saturday.

Friday Highlights

C-7:30 p.m. — Mr. Chips is a new CBC handyman series — 2.

C 7:30 — Hooray for Hollywood is a variety rerun with Charlton Heston, Don Rickles, Don Adams and others. Not worth the time—8.

CABLE 10 — 7:30 p.m, Arts Calendar with Erika Kurth; 7:30, Focus on Children; 8:00, Bullseye: Ottawa; 8:30, Spectrum; 9:00, Victoria Outdoorsman, hunting and fishing with Al Playfair; 9:30, Walter Donald and Contact 1; 10:00, International Rugby, B.C. vs. Wales at Vancouver.

Friday Movies

9:30 a.m. — Trade Winds (1938 romantic chase), Fredrick March, Joan Bennett, Ann Sothern. They don't bake these trifles any more in Hollywood's ovens but the taste isn't all that stale — 4.

C-10:30 — Chief Crazy Horse (1955 Victor Mature western, not bad). Lots of action and even some acting — 13.

C-12:45 — Sullivan's Empire (fair 1967 find-father thing), Martin Milner. Adam-12's Malloy is proof that an average guy can make it; his series survived early problems and now is five years old — 6, 8.

C-3:30 p.m. — Wild River (fair 1960 ecology drama), Montgomery Clift, Lee Remick. Director Elia Kazan tries to say something about TVA and nature but never quite finds what it is — 5.

8:00 — Detective Story (dandy 1951 police action), Kirk Douglas. See two gems by Lee Grant and Joseph Wiseman at least once — 11.

8:00 — I Aim at the Stars (so-so 1960 Wernher von Braun story), Curt Jurgens. I aimed at the ground, and missed — 13.

C-8:30 — The Couple Takes a Wife (eminently missable 1972 romanticomedy), Bill Bixby, Paula Prentiss, Valerie Perrien — 8.

C-9:00 — Stagecoach (fairly good 1966 western remake), Van Heflin, Alex Cord, Ann-Marget, Bing Crosby, Mike Connors and more. The story is so good that even a routine remake can't kill it — 7.

9:00 — Julius Caesar (good 1954 version), Brando, James Mason, John Gielgud, Louis Calhern, Greer Garson and a whole lot more. Uneven but worth seeing once — 12.

10:00 — Yankee Doodle Dandy (1942 Cagney as George M. Cohan). An Oscar winner but really only on sentiment — 13.

11:00 — Girl on the Run (tedious 1958 private eyes), Efrem Zimbalist, Edd Byrnes. From the 77 Sunset Strip silliness — 11.

C-12:00 — The Couple Takes a Wife (see 8:30) — 6.

2:00 — Mix Me a Person (1961 English romantic trifle), Anne Baxter. Instead of my explaining, why aren't you sleeping? — 12.

Friday Radio

9:00 p.m. — The CBC history series The Bush and The Salon is devoted to Nova Scotia patriot Joseph Howe — CBU-FM (105.7).

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN
World Champions

Each year the American Contract Bridge League awards the McKenney Trophy to the player who wins the highest number of master points for the year. Dr. John W. Fisher of Dallas was the 1972 winner — a remarkable accomplishment, since Dr. Fisher maintained his regular medical practice during the same period.

The novice player may well learn from today's hand which was played recently by Dr. Fisher. It clearly demonstrates the necessity for abandoning general principles that cannot win in favor of a plan that may yield the contract.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	All Pass

Opening lead: Six of hearts.

The bidding was routine, with North responding in his best suit and South promising about 19 high-card points with all unbid suits stopped. North then had an easy raise to game.

West led fourth best from his "longest and strongest" and found declarer's weak spot immediately.

Had declarer had time (for example, if West had led a club), declarer would have followed the general principle of establishing his longest suit. There would be plenty of time to knock out the ace and king of diamonds, and declarer would make a comfortable 11 tricks.

However, once one of declarer's heart stoppers was gone, the diamond suit had to be abandoned. Declarer could not afford to relinquish the lead twice, since the opponents would then take the two high diamonds and whatever number of hearts they had coming.

Dr. Fisher's only reasonable chance lay in the spade suit. If he could manage three tricks in that suit, nine tricks would be taken and the contract scored.

The superficial way to play for three spade tricks is to finesse the jack and hope that the queen were in the West hand. Had declarer made this play, he would have lost his contract.

Declarer found a far better way to play for three spade tricks. He led the spade nine which was covered by West's 10, and dummy's jack was taken by East's queen. The heart continuation was taken and the spade eight cashed. Dummy was entered with the club jack, and the two high spades totalled nine tricks.

Had West not covered the spade nine, declarer's plan was to let it ride and, if it lost to the 10, to repeat the finesse against the queen. This line of play would produce three spade tricks whenever West held either the spade queen or the spade 10. And since two chances are always better than one, Dr. Fisher's spade play was far superior to a routine finesse.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call.

Deputy Held as Killer

GARDEN, Mich. — A sheriff's deputy found handcuffed to a tractor near his burning home was arrested and charged with first-degree murder in the deaths of his wife and two small sons.

Dennis Murphy, 25, was arrested by Michigan state police several hours after his family perished in the fire. He had told investigators he was lured out of bed by a false accident report and "jumped" by two men who beat him and handcuffed him to the tractor behind the firehall in this upper Michigan fishing and farming community of 380 persons.

Murphy, a Vietnam veteran who joined the Delta County sheriff's department less than six months ago, was questioned by state police crime investigators and sheriff's deputies after he was discovered chained to the tractor by firemen responding to a report of the fire.

MONTREAL — Denis Deslongchamps, 26, went to Frank's Snack Bar to complain that several hot dogs delivered to his home arrived cold. He received a fatal knife wound in the chest in an ensuing argument.

☐

TEL AVIV — Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan said the Middle East faces a new, unpredictable situation with Egypt threatening war and making tactical preparations for it. Only 10 Per Cent In Public Service Need Be Bilingual

OTTAWA (CP) — Only 10 per cent of the 250,000 public service positions must be designated bilingual to make the public service function fully in both official languages, Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday.

"Something like half of the 25,000 posts are already filled by bilingual persons," he told the Commons as he opened debate on a resolution asking the House to endorse the government's language program in the public service.

"We do not seek a public service in which most men and women are individually bilingual.

"This approach would obviously be wrong since the vast majority of Canadians do not speak two official languages."

By designating only specific positions bilingual, he said, "I think we've found the best and least disruptive way to enable Canadians to work for the public service in the official language of their choice and to ensure that the federal government can serve every Canadian in his own language."

The government has set Dec. 31, 1978, as the target date for a functionally bilingual public service.

He answered criticism that the resolution is a waste of time because Parliament already has approved the Official Languages Act.

"We are not debating the act; we are debating the public service official-languages program."

Among the realities that must be faced was the division of the two language groups — 16 million English-speaking Canadians, most of whom speak no French, and about six million French-Canadians, "a majority of whom speak no English."

"If only because of sheer force of numbers, either group has the power to destroy the unity of the country," the prime minister said.

Trudeau said the government's bilingualism policies are designed to benefit al Canadians but it is primarily the public service which must live "at the cutting edge of this fundamental change."

11 Dodge Bullets, Flee Hijacked Plane

Colombian Plane, Weary Crew Back in Indies Isle

ORANJESTAD, Aruba (UPI) — A hijacked Colombian airliner and 38 hostages returned Thursday night to this Dutch Caribbean island for the third time in 24 hours, reportedly to collect a cash ransom, after circling overhead for more than an hour.

The four-engined turbo-prop Electra had left 5½ hours earlier after the sensational escape of 11 passengers who forced the rear door open and tumbled out of the plane amid a volley of shots as it started to taxi.

The plane's captain flew towards San Salvador at the demand of its two hijackers, but did not land and returned to Aruba.

A Colombian radio network that has remained tuned into the airline's radio frequency said the hijackers have given the company until 8 a.m. PDT to pay a reduced ransom of $160,000. The hijackers originally demanded the release of 47 "political prisoners" anj a ransom of $200,000, which later was increased to $300,000.

Juvenal Mario Gaviria, an executive of the airline, has been standing by for several hours in Aruba with a $50,000 down payment toward the ransom, according to airport sources.

A total of 49 passengers and crew members had been held captive aboard the plane in Aruba for nearly 24 hours after the craft was hijacked over Colombia.

The hijackers refused to permit a new five-man crew to board the plane and insisted that the tired, original crew continue the flight.

The long-haired, masked hijackers, armed with pistols and submachineguns, demanded a cash ransom of $300,000 for release of the hostages and plane, a four-engine Electra belonging to the Colombian SAM airline. They said they would increase their demand by $50,000 for every hour they had to wait for their money.

Heat in the parked plane during the day was described as stifling and the hijackers allowed 38 passengers, most of them women and children, to debark. Airport officials connected a second air conditioning unit to the plane in an effort to bring down the heat.

"Everyone is tired and nervous, including the hijackers," one freed passenger said. "Everyone is calling for a doctor. The hijackers are letting the sick passengers leave."

The plane was hijacked in the air between Cali and Barranquilla Wednesday on a Colombian domestic flight and the pilot ordered to fly to Oranjestad to refuel.

There were 89 persons aboard at the time, including the two hijackers. Between 5 p.m. Wednesday and midday Thursday, however, the 38 passengers were permitted to leave the plane.

The hijackers originally demanded the release of 49 "political prisoners" in Colombia, as well as a cash ransom, but apparently withdrew the former demand when the Colombian government refused to negotiate.

At dawn Thursday the hijackers order the plane flown to Lima, Peru, but the aircraft had to turn back minutes later because of problems with the propeller lubrication system.

A Netherlands Antilles Airline (ALM) plane which took some of the released passengers to Medellin, Colombia, was due back later Thursday with propeller lubricant and a company mechanic to check the plane.

The pilot of the hijacked plane, Capt. Jorge Lucena, indentified the hijackers as young men between 25 and 30. He said one held a gun to the back of his neck while the other held passengers at gunpoint. He said they claimed to have bombs in a suitcase.

The political affiliation, if any, of the hijackers was not immediately known. The prisoners whose release they demanded were mainly members of the Castroite Army of National Liberation, ELN.

Rotating Air Strikes Threatening Today

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada machinists across Canada have voted for strike action to back contract demands and are to hold a news conference here today to outline possible plans for, and timing of, rotating strikes against the airline.

Results announced Thursday by the 6,900-member International Association of Machinists, showed that 91 per cent of the ballots were for rejection of the company's latest contract offer and 87 per cent favored a strike.

The machinists may strike legally today.

(There are some 25 union members in the Victoria area but union spokesmen say no plans have been made for strike in this area at this time.)

The machinists, whose last contract expired March 25, are seeking a four-day work week and a wage increase of 15 per cent in a one-year contract.

Air Canada's last offer was for a raise of 12 per cent over 28 months.

Present rate for a two-year mechanic is $4.99 an hour and the top rate is $5.49 an hour.

A non-monetary issue in the dispute involves union complaints that some of its members were laid off last year during an air traffic controllers' strike.

Other contentious issues include the hiring of part-time employees by the company, classification by the company of 54 specific job positions with bilingual requirements and a company request to change work schedules where there is "requirement of service."

In Ottawa earlier Thursday, the federal labor department appointed Roy Gallagher of Winnipeg to mediate the dispute but a department official said later this does not interfere with the machinists' legal strike right.

Gallagher acted as a conciliator earlier in the dispute and his report was released to both parties May 22.

Former chairman of the Manitoba Minimum Wage Board, he is counsel for the Winnipeg Police Association and has been a mediator several times for the federal government in negotiations with railroads and grain handlers in Western Canada, Ottawa and Thunder Bay, Ont.

He is to commence mediation in Montreal today.

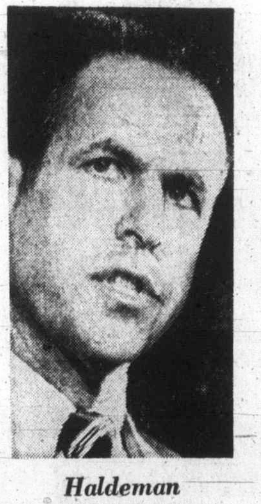
Haldeman 'No' Conflicts With Others

WASHINGTON (AP) — H. R. Haldeman said Thursday that "at no time, nor in any way," did he participate in covering up the Watergate affair while he was President Nixon's chief of staff.



Haldeman

His testimony conflicts with that of others who attended an important White House meeting last June 23, according to a senator and a congressman on separate investigating committee.

"I believe all of my actions were proper, in accord with the president's instructions and clearly in the national interest," Haldeman told reporters after testifying for three hours behind the closed doors of a Senate subcommittee.

But Senator John McClellan (Dem.-Ark.), chairman of a subcommittee looking into Central Intelligence Agency aspects of the Watergate scandal coverup, said there were serious conflicts between the testimony of White House aides and top officials of the CIA and FBI.

SASQUATCH
CROSSING

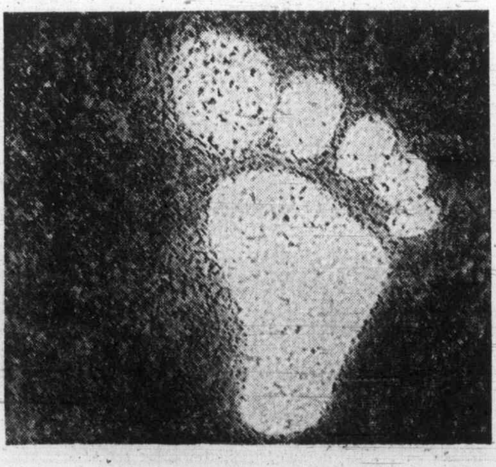
Spot To Watch

Motorists crossing Cascade Mountains on North Cascade Highway are greeted by several signs warning of "deer crossing," but on entire 75-mile highway there's only one spot where drivers are warned that a sasquatch may want to cross. Near sign is line of huge footprints indicating something may have crossed the road.



Surprising Upset

Protestant Chief Elected in Ireland

Erskine Childers, 68, a London-born Protestant, upset all the odds Thursday to win election as the Irish republic's next president.

—AP

Childers succeeds the old revolutionary Eamon de Valera, 91, who dominated Irish politics for more than half a century.

In elections the same day for local councils in Northern Ireland, the official Unionist party, traditional representative of the Protestant majority, appeared to be reasserting its grip.

Early results, covering about half the 526 seats at stake, showed the Unionists with 108 seats won. Militant Protestant "loyalist" factions, opposed to British policy, had taken 39.

The voting was split along the troublesome sectarian divide between pro-British factions and Roman Catholics hoping to unite Northern Ireland with the republic.

In the most spectacular violence of voting day in Ulster, terrorists bombed two taverns in downtown Belfast Thursday night, then sprayed one of them with machine-gun fire.

Initial reports indicated one person was killed in each incident. Several persons were wounded.

The councils are local authorities concerned with planning, utilities and matters of health and education.

Voting in Ulster was considered as a dry run for provincial assembly elections scheduled for June 28.

Despite the violence surrounding the outlawed Irish Republican Army's campaign to break the link with Britain, the Ulster poll apparently topped 60 per cent, unusually high for municipal voting.

At CO's Home: Six 'Wonderful' Secret Weekends

LONDON (Reuter) — The mass circulation Daily Mirror quotes Princess Anne's fiance, Mark Phillips, today as saying the couple spent six secret weekends together at his commanding officer's home last Autumn.

In a report from Bergen, West Germany, where Lieut. Phillips' regiment is stationed, The Mirror says he told how love blossomed as he and the princess spent idyllic weekends together at the house near Catterick army camp in Yorkshire, northern England.

"Anne and I really got to know one another last autumn. For six weekends we stayed in my commanding officer's home — an ordinary army officer's house at Catterick," Phillips is quoted as saying.

"My regiment was stationed there and Anne came up on six consecutive Friday nights. She would leave early on Monday morning. During those weekends we hardly ever left the house and no one knew we were there.

"It was a wonderful time together that we will never forget."

'Shame' For Howard

OTTAWA (CP) — For the second time in as many days a motion — this time from a Liberal — to congratulate Princess Anne on her engagement was blocked by a scattering of "nays" in the House.

While it wasn't clear where the dissension was Wednesday, it was quite evident Thursday.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena), was greeted by cries of "shame" when he said the Commons had "more important things to do."

A telegram of congratulations was sent to the princess by Governor-General Roland Michener, and Prime Minister Trudeau had sent a letter of best wishes to Queen Elizabeth.

Canadians Stay in Laos

VIENTIANE (Reuter) — Canada will remain a member of the international control commission in Laos following Ottawa's decision to withdraw observers from Vietnam, Canadian chief delegate John Hammill said today.

Hammill had been asked to comment on his country's decision to pull out of the International Commission of Control and Supervision in Vietnam.

He said both the Vientiane government and the pro-communist Pathet Lao still needed the assistance of the Laos commission which was set up in 1962 and has Canada, Poland and India as its members.

"We have received no new instructions from Ottawa," Hammill added.

A ceasefire in Laos was signed Feb. 21 and the commission here is supposed to observe the truce and oversee prisoner releases. But like its equivalent in Vietnam, it is troubled with divergent views of its members and the Pathet Lao will not allow the commission to inspect areas held by the front.

Diazanon Spray Recommended

Bud Worms Stripping City Trees

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Parks officials in Greater Victoria are fighting a losing battle against bud worms and coddling moths, two species of insects which have been defoliating thousands of trees during the past few weeks.

Experts blame a combination of factors for the sudden increase in the population of the two insect species, including a relatively mild winter and warm spring.

Systematic spraying programs can't be carried out fast enough to halt the defoliation process and parks officials expect that many more trees will be affected until the insects develop from the larvae stage.

Enjoying the insect invasion are starlings which, according to Victoria parks official Steve Powell, "are having a ball" as a result of the unexpected food supply.

"Next year, of course, we'll be having a fantastic increase in the starling population because they will have adjusted to the abundance of food," Powell said Wednesday.

Whether a greatly increased starling population will pose a new problem next year remains to be seen, he said.

Powell said the city is being flooded with telephone calls from residents who want to know why the trees on the boulevards and in their gardens are bare.

"There isn't much we can do about it. We are now systematically spraying all trees, but it's a cumbersome operation. Each tree has to be treated individually and meanwhile the insects are defoliating ten other trees," he said.

"That's what we are using. It's about the most effective spray and it's relatively harmless," he said.

Powell added that other municipalities in Greater Victoria are undertaking similar spraying programs.

M. V. Chesnut, well-known Victoria garden columnist, said sudden increases in insect population occur in cycles and nobody really knows the reasons.

"They don't appear to have any preference," he said.

Dr. J. J. O'Reilley of the provincial government's horticultural department said there was no clear-cut reason for the sudden insect plague.

"It just happens every so often and leaves the trees riddled and leafless," he said.

Sawdust Dumper Fined

Steps to prevent "the defilement of nature must take precedence over the operation of a business if that becomes necessary," Judge William Ostler said Tuesday in a harbor-pollution case in Victoria Provincial Court.

Ostler fined the firm $750.

Smith Cedar Products Ltd. of 651 Harbour, represented by lawyer Robert Hutchison, pleaded guilty to a Fisheries Act charge of unlawfully depositing a deleterious substance—sawdust and wood chips—April 17 in harbor waters frequented by fish.

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald said a fisheries officer saw sawdust and particles funnelled improperly onto a barge and took samplings from the water near VMD and the Point Ellice Bridge.

He urged "a sizeable fine" as the company had been fined $200 on a similar charge in 1970 and "officials have been after the company on numerous occasions" to improve barge-loading procedures.

Macdonald said the maximum fine was $5,000.

Hutchison said a new chute was installed by the company after the 1970 offence for loading sawdust and wood chips onto barges but also proved inadequate. He said a $2,500 telescopic chute was ordered March 12 but did not arrive until April 18, one day after the new offence.

He said the company "is not taking a cavalier attitude" about the problem and agreed there was "a considerable mess (with) chips almost like snow" in a windy day.

The company, Hutchison said, had to put too much material on the barge to make way for installation of the chute and then waited for the right tide but found it coincided with a strong wind.

NHL Fidgets as Howe Considers Aero Offer

CP-UPI

DETROIT — National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell said Thursday it would be "a tragedy" if Gordie Howe switched leagues but he said the NHL probably could not do anything about it.

"I think myself it's one of those situations where we're locked in," Campbell said. "I can't conceive of any action we can take at this time that we can stand up to and be free of serious legal consequences."

The former Detroit Red Wing great's sons, Marty, 19, and Mark, 18, have been drafted by Houston Aeros of the rival World Hockey Association and the three Howes are going to Houston Monday to talk about the possibility of them all playing next season.

NHL rules do not permit amateurs under 20 to be drafted or signed by member teams, although that matter was placed by Campbell "on the agenda" for the board of governors' annual meeting June 11-13 in Montreal.

"I don't think there's any way in which that (changing the rules) can be done in time," Campbell said in a telephone interview from his office. "That's assuming our attorneys would permit us to do it at all."

Campbell said if there is "any possibility" of bending the rules, "we would have done so. But if we bend the rules in these circumstances against a WHA team, what do you think the consequences are going to be in our litigation with the WHA?"

"I have always said I would like to play at least one year with my boys," Howe, 45, said early this week.

"They seem quite interested in the whole family."

"We've had some preliminary conversations and while they were talking about the boys they asked me how I'd like to get back on the ice," said the highest scorer in National Hockey League history.

"We'll be talking about the boys' contracts," he added. "And about the possibility of one for me!"

"I don't know. There are so many ifs . . . but, I'm definitely interested."

Howe retired from the Red Wings at the end of the 1970-71 season after 25 years with the club. During those years he made the NHL record book look like a personal testimonial.

Among the league records he holds are those for most seasons played, 25; goals scored, 786; assists, 1,023, and total points, 1,908.

The first time Howe played with his sons was in an exhibition game two years ago in Detroit to raise money to combat muscular dystrophy.

Even though the Aeros are interested in all three Howes, Gordie says there will be "no family plan" or "reduced group rates."

Weird First Inning

Jenkins Gains Sixth Win

Chicago Cubs scored 10 unearned runs in the first inning as they helped Ferguson Jenkins win his sixth game by downing the Houston Astros, 16-8, in a bizarre National League game.

"I never had such a big early lead in my baseball career," said Jenkins.

In the first inning Houston starter Dave Roberts appeared to have things under control when he retired Rick Monday and Glenn Beckert on ground balls.

After Billy Williams singled, Astro third baseman Dave Rader bobbled Ron Santo's grounder to open the gates. The Cubs went on to load the bases five times against Roberts and relievers Jim Ray and Cecil Upshaw.

Included in the weird first inning were four bases on balls, a hit batter, a wild pitch, and two-run singles by Jose Cardenal and Carmen Fanzone.

Jenkins has been giving up a lot of home runs, (17), but is off to a better start than last year. At this time last season he had five wins and five losses. This year he has six wins and three losses and is well on his way to a seventh consecutive 20-victory season.

Two of the home runs he has given up were back-to-back shots Thursday by Jesus Alou and Tommy Agee.

Jenkins figures the warm weather ahead will bring out his best.

"I'm on the beam usually in June, July and August. It just seems I can do more with my body in the warm weather."

St. Louis Cardinals had their win streak stopped at eight games, losing, 3-2, to Cincinnati.

Rams, Gabriel Settle Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A $5,000 damage suit filed by Roman Gabriel, Los Angeles Rams quarterback, against the National Football League Club has been dismissed by mutual agreement, the club annnounced.

Gabriel charged the Rams did not hold a valid contract on his services but the club countered that the dismissal of the suit indicated that the veteran player was still a member of the Rams organization.

Three Canadiens Voted To NHL All-Star Team

MONTREAL — Three members of the Montreal Canadiens, Stanley Cup champions, have been named to the National Hockey League's all-star team.

Goalkeeper Ken Dryden, defenceman Guy Lapointe and left winger Frank Mahovlich were selected from the Canadiens, who lost only 10 games in the regular schedule to easily capture the Prince of Wales Trophy for the East Division title.

Joining the three Montrealers are defenceman Bobby Orr and centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins and right winger Mickey Redmond of Detroit Red Wings.

Dryden, who won the Calder Trophy for rookies in 1971-72 and captured the Vezina Trophy for leading Canadiens to a 2.36 goals-against average during the season, topped the poll. He received 238 of a possible 240 points to gain his first berth on the all-star team.

Closest to him in the voting was Orr, who had 29 goals and 72 assists for 101 points despite missing 15 games early in the season because of a slow-healing knee which was operated on over the summer. Orr had 236 points to mark his sixth consecutive selection. His only miss was his rookie season, 1966-67, when he was one of the runners-up.

Esposito, who won his third straight scoring title and fourth in five seasons with 55 goals and 75 assists for 130 points, received 226 points. He easily beat out Philadelphia Flyers' Bobby Clarke, winner of the Hart Trophy for the league's most valuable player. It was the fifth consecutive time Esposito had been named to the team.

For Mahovlich, who has been a runner-up six times, it was his third selection to the team. Bobby Hull, who played 15 seasons for Chicago Black Hawks before joining Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association as a player-coach, dominated the left wing spot in the voting for years.

Defenceman Brad Park of New York Rangers, right winger Yvan Cournoyer of Canadiens and Clarke were the other runners-up.

Cournoyer won the Conn Smythe Trophy as the outstanding performer in the Stanley Cup playoffs but was behind Redmond in the regular schedule scoring race.

Redmond, one of three players to score 50 goals or more during the season, had 52 goals and 41 assists for 94 points, tying him with Johnny Bucyk of the Bruins and Mahovlich in seventh place. Cournoyer had 40 goals and 39 assists in 67 games.

Dryden tops the list of post-season money winners with $23,000. He collected his $15,000 share for the Stanley Cup victory, a $4,000 share for the East Division championship and $2,000 for the Vezina Trophy as well as the all-star bonus.

Voting was done by the Professional Hockey Writers of America from the 15 NHL cities (New York has two teams in the league).

Boat Sinks Near Valdez Island

Log Boom Fire Leads Rescuer To Stranded Men

Two unidentified Ruxton Island men were rescued 10½ hours after they started a signal fire on a log boom when their 22-foot converted fishboat hit a deadhead near Valdez Island and began sinking.

Their rescuer, Frederick Strafdine, who lives on Gabriola Island, near Nanaimo, about half a mile away from the incident, told the story Thursday.

The two men were returning from Silva Bay, where they had been shopping.

The signal fire was seen at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday by Strafdine, who picked the men and dogs up in his log salvage boat, the Lori C II.

Having taken the men home to their island, Strafdine notified autorities of the log boom blaze.

Another log boom, being towed in the area, by a tug headed for Nanaimo, was in difficulty Wednesday.

It broke up in high winds and it is expected to be two days before the logs are collected. Boat operators are warned to keep a lookout.

Another 5,000 logs under tow in Burrard Inlet on the mainland were also scattered.

About 100,000 cubic feet of logs are believed to have been lost in the Nanaimo mishap.

The B.C. Forest Service has banned salvage by licensed beachcombers until the logs are retrieved by their owners.

No Breakwater For Chemainus

NORTH COWICHAN — The Chemainus-Crofton and District Chamber of Commerce has been advised by the federal government that there will be no breakwater built at Chemainus.

Council recently received thanks from the chamber for "the support you gave us in making up our breakwater brief, first in 1968 and then in 1971 for the updating of our 1968 submission which went to Ottawa. I am sure you will be shocked and disappointed along with us at the lack of foresight of our ministers in Ottawa," wrote Betty Deacon, chairman of the Chemainus chamber's national affairs committee.

In the Ottawa correspondence, it was noted "an investigation into this matter has now been completed by department officials in conjunction with officials of the minister of transport and the department of the environment. It is estimated that it would cost about $318,000 to construct a breakwater which would provide the optimum combination of protection to existing facilities, space for small craft, harbor development and economy of construction.

"The department's studies indicate that the cost of the proposed breakwater would be out of proportion to the marginal benefit which would be derived by existing public small craft facilities. It has also been confirmed that there is no justifiable need to expand existing public commercial harbor facilities at Chemainus."

Mayor Gerry Smith remarked that on his visit to Chemainus a few years ago, former public works minister Arthur Laing left the optimistic impression with chamber members that a breakwater would be built. The mayor stressed that council did everything in its power to support the breakwater.

Transport Takeover Suggested

NANAIMO (CP) — Donald Beaton, chairman of the Nanaimo Regional District Board, suggested Thursday that the provincial government take over the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railwayand Vancouver Island Coach Lines and that the two become an integrated transportation system.

Beaton said he will ask the regional board next week to request a government takeover because the two systems can't work in isolation.

He said there must be integration of the two systems or a discontinuance of the railway, now owned and operated by CP Rail.

Duncan Man Missing

RCMP at Duncan said he went fishing with his pet dog in a 16-foot fibreglass outboard motor boat about 3 p.m. Wednesday, from Cowichan Bay. He was reported missing late Wednesday and a search began at 4:30 a.m. Thursday. At about 6:25 a.m., searchers found the boat floating with the dog in it off Cherry Point.

Continuing the search are four boats from the Cowichan Civil Defence Sector Marine Unit and the RCMP boat MP 53 from Ganges.

By GORDON HAMILTON
Colonist Correspondent

DUNCAN — For Bjorn Schei, a Norwegian sailor who has spent half his life at sea, it is like coming home when the coast of British Columbia comes into view. In fact, the 30-year-old seaman ranks coming to B.C. as one of the more enjoyable aspects of a sailor's life.

Aside from the similarity between Norway and the B.C. coast, what makes this province and particularly Duncan, Schei's favorite place is the Peter Bogaert's family. Schei's ship was at Harmac recently loading lumber and the young seaman was at the Bogaert's home whenever he had a chance to get away. Family life is something a sailor gets little of, so he doubly appreciates the warm home which is affored him by the Bogaert family during his stay on the Island.

A chance meeting two years ago when his ship was loading timber on the island and Schei was staying at a Duncan hotel owned by Bogaerts started the friendship, and several visits in the intervening time have cemented it.

During his recent visit, Schei spoke of his life at sea. He said he left home at the age of 15, much against his parents' wishes, and signed on board a merchant ship as a galley boy. He had no intention of making a career of it at the time, but the lure of the sea, and the opportunity to travel proved too irresistable.

His first trip was out of the French port of Rouen, and he recalled his first impressions of shipboard life.

"I got seasick right away," he said. "The river was flat as a tabletop — there was not a wave on it, but I got seasick."

Over the years Schei has been through many storms, some of the worst in the North Atlantic, but sometimes he still finds he gets sick the first day out from port.

Now after 15 years and over 20 different ships, he thinks his urge to travel has been satisfied, and he would like to settle down. He would prefer to come to B.C. permanently, but first he wants to go home to Norway to return to school.

"I have been home very little during the past four years, and I don't want to be at sea for the rest of my life. When you are at sea you forget your friends and family — I feel like settling down now," he said.

During the time he has spent at sea, Schei has visited most of the countries of the world, and it is easier for him to name the places he hasn't visited rather than the places he has, but if things go as he plans, the coast of B.C. is all he wishes to see for the rest of his life.

Zambia Posting For Economist

Lawrence Bomford, 28, of Cobble Hill, will do an economic evaluation of agricultural redistribution and settlements schemes in Zambia under the Canadian International Development Agency.

He was one of 11 Canadians awarded CIDA scholarships. Maximum annual value of the awards is $8,000, with the exact amount of each scholarship based on such factors as the scope and nature of the study program.

Bomford has a B.A. in economics.

Ferry Passengers Sail for a Song

Live music will be provided for travellers on B.C. ferries between Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland during the summer, Transportation Minister Robert Strachan announced Thursday.

A variety of musical groups will begin playing for about eight hours a day on June 25 on runs between Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay, and Horseshoe Bay and Nanaimo.

A similar program began on the Kelsey Bay-Prince Rupert run Thursday, said Strachan.

Also beginning June 25, a piper will greet travellers at each of the four Vancouver Island-Lower Mainland terminals.

The musical programs will continue daily for 11 weeks, he said, at a total cost of between $30,000 and $40,000. All the musical groups involved will be union groups and will be paid union wages.

Some of the individuals and groups, he said, would be "troubadors" strolling around the ferry, playing as they went. Others would set up their instruments in one section of the ferry and play there.

A trial run with a Victoria group last week met with "widespread public approval," said the minister, which was why the government had decided to go ahead for the whole summer. His department had received many phone calls and letters encouraging such a program, he added.

All the groups have not yet been selected by the government and some auditions were still being held. Any group that wished to audition could apply to the government, he said, but all musicians chosen would be from B.C.

Lobster Transplant Experiment Successful, Insists Biologist

NANAIMO (CP) — A federal biologist who was rebuked for embarrassing Environment Minister Jack Davis over the Pacific lobster experiment says the public has a right to know why it was abandoned.

Dr. Ray Ghelardi of the Nanaimo Fisheries Research Station insisted Thursday his initial experiments with lobsters transplanted from the Atlantic were a success.

"I suspect that someone in Ottawa decided that the project should be stopped," he said. "It was not an attempt to start a lobster population but to determine whether it was biologically possible."

Ghelardi was rebuked for releasing information that led to what was described as "unwarranted" opposition badgering of Davis in Parliament.

Ghelardi is leaving the station today to return to California, where he worked before beginning the project in 1965.

He said the dispute over the experiments is a factor in his decision but that he is returning primarily for family reasons.

The public, he said, is entitled to explicit answers to questions he has not been able to get answered:

What was the basis for the priority that was assigned to it at the inception and subsequently?

Who decided to end the project and why?

In an exchange in the Commons May 8 with Davis, the Progressive Conservative member for South Shore, Lloyd Crouse, said only success the federal fisheries department could claim was that lobsters can fly — from the east to west coast in airplanes.

Assistant Deputy Minister K. C. Lucas told a Commons committee he agreed the first phase was a success, but that phase two, the commercial production of Pacific lobsters, was abandoned because of the costs that would be involved.

Dr. Wally Johnson, director of the station, told the committee that experimental lobsters were lost to ocean currents and that fdetailed oceanographic studies would have to be made at great expense to see whether a suitable area could be found for lobster grounds.

11 Dodge Bullets, Flee Hijacked Plane

Colombian Liner, Weary Crew Back in Indies Isle

ORANJESTAD, Aruba (UPI) — A hijacked Colombian airliner and 38 hostages returned Thursday night to this Dutch Caribbean island for the third time in 24 hours, reportedly to collect a cash ransom, after circling overhead for more than an hour.

The four-engined turbo-prop Electra had left 5½ hours earlier after the sensational escape of 11 passengers who forced the rear door open and tumbled out of the plane amid a volley of shots as it started to taxi.

The plane's captain flew towards San Salvador at the demand of its two hijackers, but did not land and returned to Aruba.

A Colombian radio network that has remained tuned into the airline's radio frequency said the hijackers have given the company until 8 a.m. PDT today to pay a reduced ransom of $160,000. The hijackers originally demanded the release of 47 "political prisoners and a ransom of $200,000, which later was increased to $300,000.

Juvenal Mario Gaviria, an executive of the airline, has been standing by for several hours in Aruba with a $50,000 down payment toward the ransom, according to airport sources.

A total of 49 passengers and crew members had been held captive aboard the plane in Aruba for nearly 24 hours after the craft was hijacked over Colombia.

The hijackers refused to permit a new five-man crew to board the plane and insisted that the tired, original crew continue the flight.

The long-haired, masked hijackers, armed with pistols and submachineguns, demanded a cash ransom of $300,000 for release of the hostages and plane, a four-engine Electra belonging to the Colombian SAM airline. They said they would increase their demand by $50,000 for every hour they had to wait for their money.

Heat in the parked plane during the day was described as stifling and the hijackers allowed 38 passengers, most of them women and children, to debark. Airport officials connected a second air conditioning unit to the plane in an effort to bring down the heat.

"Everyone is tired and nervous, including the hijackers," one freed passenger said. "Everyone is calling for a doctor. The hijackers are letting the sick passengers leave."

The plane was hijacked in the air between Cali and Barranquilla Wednesday on a Colombian domestic flight and the pilot ordered to fly to Oranjestad to refuel.

There were 89 persons aboard at the time, including the two hijackers. Between 5 p.m. Wednesday and midday Thursday, however, the 38 passengers were permitted to leave the plane.

The hijackers originally demanded the release of 49 "political prisoners" in Colombia, as well as a cash ransom, but apparently withdrew the former demand when the Colombian government refused to negotiate.

At dawn Thursday the hijackers ordered the plane flown to Lima, Peru, but the aircraft had to turn back minutes later because of problems with the propeller lubrication system.

A Netherlands Antilles Airline (ALM) plane which took some of the released passengers to Medellin, Colombia, was due back later Thursday with propeller lubricant and a company mechanic to check the plane.

The pilot of the hijacked plane, Capt. Jorge Lucena, indentified the hijackers as young men between 25 and 30. He said one held a gun to the back of his neck while the other held passengers at gunpoint. He said they claimed to have bombs in a suitcase.

The political affiliation, if any, of the hijackers was not immediately known. The prisoners whose release they demanded were mainly members of the Castroite Army of National Liberation, ELN.

Rotating Air Strikes Threatening Today

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada machinists across Canada have voted for strike action to back contract demands and are to hold a news conference here today to outline possible plans for, and timing of, rotating strikes against the airline.

Results announced Thursday by the 6,900-member International Association of Machinists, showed that 91 per cent of the ballots were for rejection of the company's latest contract offer and 87 per cent favored a strike.

The machinists may strike legally today.

(There are some 25 union members in the Victoria area but union spokesmen say no plans have been made for strike in this area at this time.)

The machinists, whose last contract expired March 25, are seeking a four-day work week and a wage increase of 15 per cent in a one-year contract.

Air Canada's last offer was for a raise of 12 per cent over 28 months.

Present rate for a two-year mechanic is $4.99 an hour and the top rate is $5.49 an hour.

A non-monetary issue in the dispute involves union complaints that some of its members were laid off last year during an air traffic controllers' strike.

Other contentious issues include the hiring of part-time employees by the company, classification by the company of 54 specific job positions with bilingual requirements and a company request to change work schedules where there is "requirement of service."

In Ottawa earlier Thursday, the federal labor department appointed Roy Gallagher of Winnipeg to mediate the dispute but a department official said later this does not interfere with the machinists' legal strike right.

Gallagher acted as a conciliator earlier in the dispute and his report was released to both parties May 22.

Former chairman of the Manitoba Minimum Wage Board, he is counsel for the Winnipeg Police Association and has been a mediator several times for the federal government in negotiations with railroads and grain handlers in Western Canada, Ottawa and Thunder Bay, Ont.

He is to commence mediation in Montreal today.

Colonist Street Price Rises

Haldeman 'No' Conflicts With Others

WASHINGTON (AP) — H. R. Haldeman said Thursday that "at no time, nor in any way," did he participate in covering up the Watergate affair while he was President Nixon's chief of staff.

Haldeman

His testimony conflicts with that of others who attended an important White House meeting last June 23, according to a senator and a congressman on separate investigating committee.

"I believe all of my actions were proper, in accord with the president's instructions and clearly in the national interest," Haldeman told reporters after testifying for three hours behind the closed doors of a Senate subcommittee.

But Senator John McClellan (Dem.-Ark.), chairman of a subcommittee looking into Central Intelligence Agency aspects of the Watergate scandal coverup, said there were serious conflicts between the testimony of White House aides and top officials of the CIA and FBI.

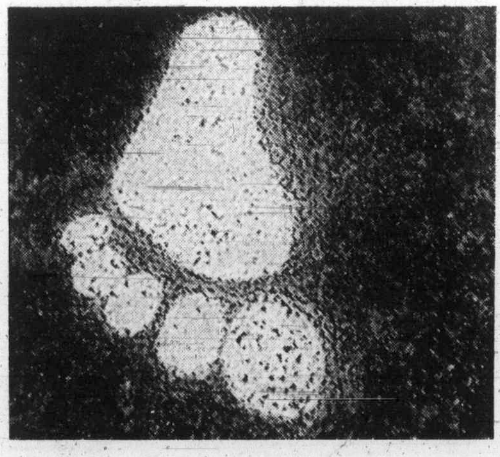
Spot To Watch

Motorists crossing Cascade Mountains on North Cascade Highway are greeted by several signs warning of "deer crossing," but on entire 75-mile highway there's only one spot where drivers are warned that a sasquatch may want to cross. Near sign is line of huge footprints indicating something may have crossed the road.



Surprising Upset

Protestant Chief Elected in Ireland

DUBLIN (AP) — Erskine Childers, 68, a London-born Protestant, upset all the odds Thursday to win election as the Irish republic's next president.

Childers succeeds the old revolutionary Eamon de Valera, 91, who dominated Irish politics for more than half a century.

In elections the same day for local councils in Northern Ireland, the official Unionist party, traditional representative of the Protestant majority, appeared to be reasserting its grip.

Early results, covering about half the 526 seats at stake, showed the Unionists with 108 seats won. Militant Protestant "loyalist" factions, opposed to British policy, had taken 39.

The voting was split along the troublesome sectarian divide between pro-British factions and Roman Catholics hoping to unite Northern Ireland with the republic.

In the most spectacular violence of voting day in Ulster, terrorists bombed two taverns in downtown Belfast Thursday night, then sprayed one of them with machine-gun fire.

Initial reports indicated one person was killed in each incident. Several persons were wounded.

The councils are local authorities concerned with planning, utilities and matters of health and education.

Voting in Ulster was considered as a dry run for provincial assembly elections scheduled for June 28.

Despite the violence surrounding the outlawed Irish Republican Army's campaign to break the link with Britain, the Ulster poll apparently topped 60 per cent, unusually high for municipal voting.

When Icy Eyes Aren't Smiling

REYKJAVIK (UPI) — President Nixon lifted his glass of champagne in a toast Thursday night at a summit meeting dinner given by President Kristian Eldjarn of Iceland.

"I offer a toast this evening which has never been offered before because such a meeting as this never occurred before and may never occur again.

At CO's Home: Six 'Wonderful' Secret Weekends

LONDON (Reuter) — The mass circulation Daily Mirror quotes Princess Anne's fiance, Mark Phillips, today as saying the couple spent six secret weekends together at his commanding officer's home last Autumn.

In a report from Bergen, West Germany, where Lieut. Phillips' regiment is stationed, The Mirror says he told how love blossomed as he and the princess spent idyllic weekends together at the house near Catterick army camp in Yorkshire, northern England.

"Anne and I really got to know one another last autumn. For six weekends we stayed in my commanding officer's home — an ordinary army officer's house at Catterick," Phillips is quoted as saying.

"My regiment was stationed there and Anne came up on six consecutive Friday nights. She would leave early on Monday morning. During those weekends we hardly ever left the house and no one knew we were there.

"It was a wonderful time together that we will never forget."

'Shame' For Howard

OTTAWA (CP) — For the second time in as many days a motion — this time from a Liberal — to congratulate Princess Anne on her engagement was blocked by a scattering of "nays" in the House.

While it wasn't clear where the dissension was Wednesday, it was quite evident Thursday.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena), was greeted by cries of "shame" when he said the Commons had "more important things to do."

A telegram of congratulations was sent to the princess by Governor-General Roland Michener, and Prime Minister Trudeau had sent a letter of best wishes to Queen Elizabeth.

VIENTIANE (Reuter) — Canada will remain a member of the international control commission in Laos following Ottawa's decision to withdraw observers from Vietnam, Canadian chief delegate John Hammill said today.

Hammill had been asked to comment on his country's decision to pull out of the International Commission of Control and Supervision in Vietnam.

He said both the Vientiane government and the pro-communist Pathet Lao still needed the assistance of the Laos commission which was set up in 1962 and has Canada, Poland and India as its members.

"We have received no new instructions from Ottawa," Hammill added.

A ceasefire in Laos was signed Feb. 21 and the commission here is supposed to observe the truce and oversee prisoner releases. But like its equivalent in Vietnam, it is troubled with divergent views of its members and the Pathet Lao will not allow the commission to inspect areas held by the front.
